SIG'S SCORPION CARRY

A flagship M1911 with features you'd expect and a few that you wouldn't.

Text by Peter G. Kokalis

Photos by Peter G. Kokalis and Michael P. Flores

I have a very close friend who is a senior project engineer at Aberdeen Proving Ground. He believes that both the M1911A1 pistol and the .45 ACP cartridge for which it is chambered are obsolete. The Army is about to commence trials to replace the M9 caliber 9x19mm Parabellum handgun that it presently fields. The M9 has been controversial ever since the first day it was fielded. While the majority of its "problems" have been addressed, I think it's fair to say that it's a handgun everyone still feels "edgy" about. So, the U.S. Army will eventually get a new handgun. At this time, I think it's safe to say only two things for certain. It will not be John Moses Browning's M1911 platform and it will not be chambered for the .45 ACP cartridge.

In my opinion, which is worth almost nothing, that's too bad for the following reasons.

Let's discuss the cartridge first. Development of the .45 automatic pistol cartridge generally paralleled that of the handgun itself. The round that was to evolve into the official cartridge and that was used during the first trials was developed at Frankford Arsenal and was unofficially referred to as the Model 1906 Cal. 45 Automatic Pistol Ball Cartridge. It had a brass rimless case with a bullet-seating cannelure, and was loaded with a 230-grain, cupronickel-jacketed bullet traveling at 800 fps.

In 1907, the Union Metallic Cartridge Co. received a government order to manufacture 100,000 rounds of caliber .45 automatic pistol ammunition with a shorter case than the Frankford Arsenal cartridge. In 1909, U.M.C. was given an order for 200,000 rounds for their shorter cartridge, with an added case cannelure and a knurled cannelure on the bullet. This round, with the primer pocket made slightly smaller (to avoid confusion with the .30 caliber rifle primer) and the bullet cannelure deleted, was adopted in the summer of 1911 and first manufactured that year at Frankford Arsenal.

President Theodore Roosevelt appointed Brig. Gen. William Crozier Army Chief of Ordnance in 1901. In 1904, he created a board of two officers, Col. John T. Thompson (Ordnance) and Col. Louis A. LaGarde (Medical Corps), to resolve the small-and-fast versus large-and-slow handgun caliber controversy. LaGarde concluded his famous report with the following comment, "The Board was of the opinion that a bullet which will have the shock effect and stopping power at short ranges necessary for a military pistol or revolver should have a caliber not less than .45."

The first full-fledged U.S. tests consisting of seven semiautomatic pistols and two revolvers in this caliber took place in 1907. Colt, Savage and German DWM Luger-designed caliber .45 pistols made it through the first round of trials. DWM subsequently withdrew the Luger from further U.S. trials.

Field tests conducted in 1908 were less satisfactory for the Colt entries. They snapped sears and went full-auto, broke firing pins and jammed constantly. The Savage design fared even worse. After a great deal of revision and improvement of both the Colt and Savage pistols, the final trials commenced 15 March 1911. The Colt Model of 1911, Special Army serial number 5, demolished the Savage entry. While the Savage had only 37 stoppages in 6,000 rounds, the Colt had none. U.S. Army Ordnance officially adopted the locked-breech, short recoil-operated Colt pistol on 28 March 1911. The project that was to result in the so-called "Colt Commander" commenced early in 1948 in a U.S. government post-World-War-II-era trial to replace the M1911 Government Model with a lighter pistol that would be issued to officers. The requirements were a chambering in caliber 9x19mm Parabellum, a length not to exceed 7 inches and a weight of not more than 25 ounces.

Trial specimens included the Browning Hi Power from both Inglis in Canada and Fabrique Nationale in Liege, Belgium and Smith & Wesson's new Model 39. Colt's entry was a highly modified M1911 chambered for the 9x19mm Parabellum round with a barrel shortened from 5 to 4.25 inches and a 9-round magazine. Early in 1948, the Colt Company, in developmental work for lightweight, heavy-caliber handguns decided to investigate a frame made of aluminum alloy rather than from the then conventional alloy-steel forgings.

The Aluminum Corporation of America (Alcoa) forgings were made from high-tensile strength aluminum alloy and designated as "Colt alloy." These forgings were delivered to Colt's frame machining department, where more than 140 machining operations were performed on them. The result was a half-dozen .45 ACP pistol frames that were unbelievably lightweight for the time. They were assembled into pistols chambered for 9x19mm Parabellum.

lum, .38 Super, and .45 ACP cartridges. Today, M1911-type pistols are generally marketed in three different configurations. The original model with a 5-inch barrel is frequently referred to as a "Government Model." The mid-size and most popular model is the so-called "Commander" model with a 4 to 4.25-inch barrel. Each manufacturer has its own model designation for this mid-size M1911-type. The smallest M1911 is called by Colt's an "Officer's ACP" and by a myriad of other designations by other manufacturers.

Their other M1911-type pistols are designated "Full Size," "Compact," and "Ultra-Compact."

SHOTGUN NEWS was recently sent a SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry for test and evaluation. Chambered for America's favorite pistol cartridge (and mine), the .45 ACP, the barrel's six-groove rifling has a 1:16 twist, which is quite conventional for this caliber. This is basically a so-called "Commander Model" pistol with a barrel length of 4.2 inches. The width, at the grip panels is 1.26 inches with an overall height of 5.5 inches and a total length of 7.7 inches. The weight, with an empty magazine, is 38.3 ounces. The slide is machined from a 416 stainless steel extrusion (bar stock). The frame, also 416 stainless steel, is a machined forging.

SIG Sauer Model 1911 pistols feature so-called external extractors, about which there has been much foolish debate. One of the world's greatest 9x19mm Parabellum pistols, the Browning Hi Power, initially had an internal extractor. In 1962, to significantly reduce the cost of manufacture, the extractor was simplified and became an external type that provided much more positive and reliable functioning. There is absolutely no rational justification whatsoever to the illogical rage of so-called "M1911 traditionalists" over this feature.

There are eight slanted cocking serrations on each side of the slide at the rear. The slide's ejection port has been lowered and flared—and the rear beveled—to enhance ejection reliability and protect empty cases from denting. Like the original M1911, this pistol uses a short recoil spring guide rod. There are three abbreviated slanted cocking serrations on each side of the slide at the front end. Their principle function is for "press checking," a concept that involves pushing the slide slightly to the rear to visually inspect to confirm that a round has been chambered.

The pistol's finish is Cerakote Flat Dark Earth, and it is quite distinctive. Small parts, such as the magazine catch/release, grip panel screws, manual safety levers, grip safety, front and rear sights, slide stop lever, barrel bushing and recoil spring cap have a black Nitron finish. SIG

Although it's a mid-size M1911 with a steel frame, the Scorpion Carry weighs 38.3 ounces with an empty magazine and recoil is exceptionally mild.

Sauer's Nitron finish is a thin layer of amorphous "DLC" that both creates a hard protective coating and enhances lubricity. "DLC," in turn, is the acronym for Diamond-Like Carbon. DLC thus has some of the properties of diamond. Although it appears smooth to the naked eye, DLC actually has the form of a microscopic cobblestone street. There are seven different forms of DLC. The various forms can be applied to almost any material that is compatible with a vacuum environment. In short, the principal desirable qualities of a Nitron finish are hardness; wear resistance and lubricity, or "slickness."

The left side controls are those and where you would expect them. The manual thumb safety is an extended type, as is the slide stop lever. The magazine catch/release is slightly extended. There is a bilateral thumb safety on the right side.

The grip panels are fabricated from G-10/FR-4 Epoxy, a thermosetting industrial laminate consisting of a continuous filament glass cloth material.

SIG Sauer Model 1911 pistols feature external extractors. Kokalis pooh-poohs the illogical rage of so-called "M1911 traditionalists" over this feature.

The MIL-STD-1913 rail interface found on the Scorpion Carry's dust cover is a useful feature that has become ever more popular for mounting lights and lasers.

While the word "ambidextrous" is most often used by gun writers to describe this feature, that word actually refers to the ability to use both hands with equal facility. It's far more accurate to refer to a firearm's one or more controls located on both sides of the rifle or pistol as bilateral, meaning having or formed of two sides, i.e., two-sided.

The frame's front strap carries fine checkering of 25 lines per inch (lpi) and improves the gripping surface, especially under high tension environments.

The mainspring housing, also made from G-10, has the same distinctive scalloped pattern as the grip panels. Not traditional, but great-looking nonetheless.

The grip panels, with a scalloped pattern, match the slide and frame's finish and are made of G-10/FR-4 Epoxy. This is a thermosetting industrial laminate consisting of a continuous filament glass cloth material with an epoxy resin binder. This product, first introduced in the 1950s, has characteristics of high strength, excellent electrical properties and chemical resistance. These properties are maintained not only at room temperature, but also under humid or moist conditions. No grip panels

The pistol has a skeletonized Commander-style hammer. The bilateral thumb safety has a slightly extended, serrated face on both the right and left sides.

The Nitron-coated trigger has vertical serrations and can be adjusted for overtravel and take-up. Kokalis had Robar reduce his to 3.5 pounds.

ever placed on a handgun have ever come close to approaching all the amazing qualities of G-10. Each grip panel is held to the frame by two steel, hex head screws.

M1911-type pistols are more and more frequently encountered with MIL-STD-1913 rail interfaces on their dust covers. While this provides the operator with the opportunity to install a valuable tactical light, it limits choices for carrying the handgun.

The frame's front strap carries fine checkering of 25 lines per inch (lpi). The mainspring housing, also made from G-10, has the same distinctive scalloped pattern as the grip panels. The low profile sights have self-luminous, green night-sight inserts, one on each side of the open square-notch rear sight with a recessed surface and one in the blade-type front sight.

Tritium (an isotope of hydrogen) provides the energy source for self-luminous sights of this type. Tritium gas and a phosphor particle are pressurized within a tiny glass capsule. Because they are nuclear in nature, tritium sights have a half-life that provides a useful life of about ten years. The capsules are resistant to oil, water, corrosion and temperature changes. While it has been my experience that white dots or outlines are never noticed under stress, self-luminous tritium sights are useful adjuncts to firing at night or under subdued-light conditions. They are, however, no substitute for a flashlight, as they do not illuminate or aid in the identification of a target as a potential threat.

The beavertail steel grip safety has a pronounced bump on the bottom to insure that it is disconnected even if not depressed completely. It entirely cups the hammer to prevent "hammer bite" and permits as high a grip as possible. As the front strap has also been slightly relief-cut just under the rear portion of the trigger guard (a so-called kidney cut), the high grip permitted by these two features lowers the bore line in relation to the shooter's hand and reduces the perceived recoil somewhat. The pistol is equipped with a skeletonized Commander-style hammer. The thumb safety, which is bilateral, has a slightly extended, serrated face on both the right and left sides.

The end of most M1911-type recoil spring plugs are checkered. For no reason that I can think of other than cosmetics, that of the SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry is unchecked and dish shaped.

The Nitron-coated, aluminum alloy, skeletonized trigger has a vertically serrated face and can be adjusted for overtravel and take-up. It breaks cleanly and without any trace of creep with a pull weight of exactly 4.5 pounds, as measured with dead weights. The trigger has a stainless steel bow. This trigger pull weight is far too heavy for me, although it will be satisfactory for most. I had my close personal friend, Robbie Barrkman of the Robar Companies, Inc., (Dept. SGN, 21438 North 7th Avenue, Suite B, Phoenix, AZ 85027; phone: 623-581-2648; fax: 623-582-0059; e-mail: robarguns@earthlink.net; website: www.robarguns.com), perform a custom trigger job. Robbie removed all traces of creep and brought the trigger pull weight down to 3.5 pounds, which to me, is ideal. Custom work at this level is not cheap and tuning an M1911 trigger costs $125, including the necessary test firing.

The magazine well has been beveled to ease insertion of magazines. In addition, an extended "speed chute" has been attached to the mag well. The checkered steel magazine catch/release button is slightly higher than usual to offer access by the thumb without altering the firing grip, but not long enough to induce an accidental release.

The SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry comes with two eight-round, single-column, detachable box-type magazines. The polished stainless steel body has seven indicator holes on each side. The follower is steel with a black finish. The extended, black polymer floorplate can be easily removed and magazines should be completely disassembled every time the pistol is cleaned.

The manufacturer's suggested retail price complete with two eight-round magazines, lockable plastic storage case, and trigger lock and instruction manual is $1,213.

SIG Sauer manufactures M1911 pistols with two different slide configurations. The so-called "SIG profile" found on the Scorpion series has a larger radius on top of the slide and relief cuts on the sides. This contour provides a unique look that resembles SIG Sauer classic pistol models, such as the P226 and P220. The only downside to this slide geometry is the difficulty in finding holsters that can accommodate SIG Sauer M1911 pistols with this configuration. What SIG Sauer refers to as a "traditional" slide is machined to the same slide radius as the original and vast majority of M1911 handguns.

Disassembly Assistance

While a standard bushing wrench will do, I cannot tell you how many times I have watched the recoil spring and the recoil spring plug sail into the sunset when I was field stripping an M1911 pistol. This problem has been solved once and for all by the Perry Disassembly Tool designed and manufactured by Perry Competition, Inc. (Dept. SGN, P.O. Box 2746, Titusville, Fla. 32781; phone: 321-537-7188; e-mail: sales@perrycomp.com; website: www.perrycomp.com).

Simply insert the tool's rod into the barrel and align the tool with the barrel bushing. Press the tool down on the recoil spring plug and rotate the tool and the barrel bushing clockwise for approximately a quarter turn; all the while holding the tool firmly down toward the barrel during the rotation. Slowly pull the tool away and the recoil spring and recoil spring plug will come forward—under control—and can then be completely withdrawn from the pistol.

Use the tool to rotate the barrel bushing counterclockwise to withdraw it from the slide. Use the tool again to reassembly the barrel bushing, recoil spring and recoil spring plug. You can also attach an assortment of cleaning tips to the tool's rod. The tool fits both commercial and military-style M1911 barrel bushings. It costs $30 plus $6 for shipping and handling. It's the best M1911 disassembly tool I have ever used.

Test and Evaluation

There is a reason why caliber .45 ACP M1911-type pistols remain so popular after more than one hundred years and it's not just nostalgia. Cutting to the quick, it's because of the wound ballistics potential of its large-caliber, heavy bullet. Penetration is, without doubt, the most important single parameter in measuring the wound ballistics performance of small arms ammunition. The bullet must penetrate deeply enough to crush, cut and break through the human body's vital structures and organs. The consensus is that the capacity to penetrate up to 18 inches of soft tissue is desirable and that any bullet that is not capable of penetrating at least 12 inches is not acceptable. Once we've obtained the required penetration, the bullet that makes the biggest hole will do the most damage. Most sophisticated wound ballistics testing makes use of a 10% solution of ordnance gelatin (Type 250 A) as originally formulated at the U.S. Army's Wound Ballistics Laboratory, Presidio of San Francisco. This test simulant reproduces the penetration depth measured in living-swine leg muscle (which closely replicates that of humans) when used at 39° F.

We used three different loads in our test of the SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry pistol. They were all provided by Black Hills Ammunition (Dept. SGN, P.O. Box 3090, Rapid City, SD 57709-3090; phone: 605-348-5150; fax: 605-348-9827; website: www.black-hills.com). All Black Hills ammunition is tested using the materials and techniques developed by Dr. Martin L. Fackler at the U.S. Army's Wound Ballistics Laboratory.

The ammunition consisted of two Hornady projectiles, a 230- and 185-grain Jacketed Hollow Point (JHP), and a Barnes 185-grain JHP. The following parameters were measured: IY (Initial Yaw—the distance in the tissue simulant at which projectile yaw, if any, commences), TCL (Temporary Cavity Length), TCD (Temporary Cavity Diameter), TCDL (the point at which the temporary cavity is at its greatest diameter), fragmentation data—including retained weight, average and greatest amount of bullet expansion and the MPD (Maximum Penetration Depth).

The 230-grain Hornady JHP bullet commenced yawing at .75" with a TCL of 7 inches, a TCD of 2.5 inches, a TCDL of 3.25 inches, and a MPD of 13.25 inches. There was no significant fragmentation. The average expansion diameter was .678" and the largest expansion diameter observed was .700". The velocity was 808 fps.

The 185-grain Hornady JHP bullet commenced yawing at .5" with a TCL of 9.5 inches, a TCD of 3.25 inches, a TCDL of 3.75 inches, and a MPD of 15.25 inches. There was no significant fragmentation. The average expansion diameter was .592" and the largest expansion diameter observed was .605". The velocity was 1057 fps.

The 185-grain Barnes TAC-XP +P JHP bullet commenced yawing at .375" with a TCL of 8.5 inches, a TCD of 2.25 inches, a TCDL of 3.25 inches, and a MPD of 12.125 inches. There was no significant fragmentation. The average expansion diameter was .816" and the largest expansion diameter observed was .819". The velocity was 1012 fps.

Note that as a general rule, the greater the bullet's expansion, the less it will penetrate. Normally, I would select the heaviest bullet, which would be the Hornady 230-grain JHP. But, examining the test results, what stands out is that the Barnes 185-grain TAC-XP +P JHP bullet expanded to over .80 cal. and penetrated just over the 12-inch minimum we're looking for. In this instance, that's the load I would select for everyday carry.

Our test and evaluation of the SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry pistol resulted in no surprises. We have now fired over 500 rounds through this pistol. There have been no malfunctions of any kind. At 7 yards, the distance under which the majority of gunfights with a handgun take place, and firing offhand from a strong Weaver position, the SIG Sauer M1911 Scorpion Carry will place all rounds into a 1.5-inch group. That's more than good enough for government work. This is an excellent M1911-type pistol and as it has a steel frame, the recoil impulse is quite mild. ©

RIFLES OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY PART I

LONG ARMS OF THE BLUEJACKETS & LEATHERNECKS

Skill with small arms was vital for sailors in the “wooden ships and iron men” era. Landing parties had to be prepared for sharp combat, and the Navy provided distinctive long arms.

By Paul Scarlata Photos by: James Walters, Nathan Reynolds & Michael Hughes (unless otherwise indicated)

“Standardization.” According to the Dictionary of Military and Associated Terms (U.S. Department of Defense, 2005), this term means “The process by which the Department of Defense achieves the closest practicable cooperation among the Services and Defense agencies for the most efficient use of research, development, and production resources, and agrees to adopt on the broadest possible basis the use of: a. common or compatible operational, administrative, and logistic procedures; b. common or compatible technical procedures and criteria; c. common, compatible, or interchangeable supplies, components, weapons, or equipment; and d. common or compatible tactical doctrine with corresponding organizational compatibility.”

Well brother, in the 19th century, the American armed forces apparently never heard of the word!

Ever since their founding in the late 18th Century, the U.S. Army and U.S. Navy had gone their separate ways regarding small arms. The two branches adopted different muskets, rifles and handguns—often in different calibers—with little or no thought given to standardization. While to some degree this was because of their different tactical requirements, there was also a healthy dose of inter-service rivalry. Or to put bluntly, no self-respecting admiral was going to adopt a weapon on the say-so of some upstart general!

All Navy ships carried small arms to repel boarders, equip landing and boarding parties and for guarding prisoners. The crews of most larger vessels included a contingent of Marines whose duties ranged from manning the tops during ship-to-ship encounters, acting as gun crews, taking part in landing parties and—in some instances—controlling unruly sailors.

While the Army considered the single-shot Model 1855 Springfield rifled musket perfectly adequate for its needs, the pre-Civil War U.S. Navy had differing opinions on the matter. During that era, naval vessels serving on foreign stations were often called upon to provide landing parties to protect American diplomats, business interests and missionaries or...unofficially of course...intervene in local political squabbles in order to insure that their outcome would be advantageous to American foreign policy.

These small parties of Marines and sailors usually faced numerically superior foes and it was felt that weapons capable of a higher rate of firepower would be advantageous.

At the outbreak of the American Civil War (1861–1865) the U.S. Navy had 42 ships in commission. Another 48 were laid up and listed as available for service as soon as crews could be assembled and trained. Most were sailing vessels, many of which were hopelessly outdated.

By the end of the conflict, there were 671 vessels in service, most of them were steam-powered and increasing numbers were ironclads. By the end of the war, more than 50,000 sailors and Marines were serving on Union warships and manning shore stations.

U.S. Navy Carbine, Model 1841

In the years before the Civil War, the U.S. Navy used a variety of long arms. These included percussion smoothbore and rifled muskets and the second breechloading long arm to see service with the U.S. armed forces—the U.S. Navy Carbine, Model 1841.¹

Better known as the Jenks-Merrill or simply “Jenks Carbine,” it was designed by William Jenks and featured a sliding breechblock similar to that on the Westley-Richards Monkey tail rifle. Pulling a lever on top of the barrel to the rear opened a hole on top of the breech, into which a round lead ball was inserted, followed by a charge of loose blackpowder. Folding the lever forward sealed the breech. The carbine featured a side mounted “mule ear” hammer that struck a percussion cap on a nipple on the right side of the barrel to fire the charge.

In 1841 Jenks received a contract to supply the Navy with 4,000 carbines produced by N.P. Ames of Springfield, Mass. They were .54 cal., smoothbore weapons with 24.25-inch barrels held in the stock by two brass barrel bands, the front sight being integral with the forward band.

The Jenks was a revolutionary design for its time. As was to be expected, there was resistance to its introduction into the service. As were their Army compatriots,

All Remington-made Jenks carbines were fitted with a Maynard tape primer as used on the Model 1855 Springfield rifle. It was not always especially reliable. (Julia) some of the “Old Shellbacks” in the Navy’s upper command chain looked askance upon this new technology. It was thought that the percussion musket had shown its worth and it would be foolish to switch over to some unproven system. But the Navy’s desire for a long arm with a high rate of fire overcame whatever doubts there were to its adoption.

In 1846 the Navy tendered a second contract for an additional 1,000 carbines, which were produced by Remington. The Remington-made carbines featured a Maynard tape priming system, and many of the earlier carbines were modified to use this device.

Seventy Remington-made carbines were issued to each of the new screw frigates USS Colorado, Congress, Cumberland, Merrimack, Minnesota, Niagara, Portsmouth, Saranac, Susquehanna and Wabash during the late 1850s.

The Jenks first saw service in the Mexican-American War (1846–1848). With the outbreak of hostilities in 1861, the Navy contracted Arthur Eastman and Simon Stevens to alter 2,800 of the Jenks carbines by rifling their barrels and opening the loading hole in the barrel to oval shape so as to allow the use of paper cartridges.²

Jenks carbines remained in the arms racks of some Union ships until the end of the war.

U.S. Navy Rifle, Model 1861

Between 1856–1858 the Navy ran trials on a rifled musket made by the Eli Whitney Company of Hartford, Conn. These trials were carried out onboard the USS Plymouth under the direction of Capt. (later Admiral) Dahlgren.³ The rifle was very similar to the French Mle. 1846 Carabine à tige and retained many of the French design features, the most notable being the long range adjustable rear sight.

While the Army had switched over to a smaller .58 cal. for its rifled muskets, it has been reported that Dahlgren felt the larger caliber was more practical for shipboard use. With the outbreak of hostilities it was officially adopted as the U.S. Navy Rifle, Model 1861 and Whitney received a contract to deliver 10,000 of them.

Production problems resulted in continual delays, and it wasn't until February 1863 that substantial numbers were delivered. The USS Eutaw, Nansemond and William Bacon were the first ships to receive the new rifles. By late 1863, Whitney had managed to catch up on his contract, and had delivered 5,300 of the rifles to the Navy. Additional rifles were delivered to the Navy by the end of 1864, fulfilling the contract.

The Model 1861 proved popular, so much so that author John D. McAulay notes in his book Civil War Small Arms of the U.S. Navy & Marine Corps that nearly all of the rifles delivered by the summer of 1864 had been issued to warships and the Boston Naval yard was turning down requests for Plymouth Rifles, as there were none available in stores.⁴

The aforementioned production delays encountered by Whitney put the Navy in a bind. They had a desperate need for small arms and so began casting about for other suppliers.

Throughout the war, the Navy routinely landed parties of sailors and Marines ashore on raids, reconnaissance or to aid the regular land forces. Composed of men from the ships of the local squadron, these shore parties varied in size from a single midshipman and a few blue jackets sent ashore to destroy a Confederate salt works or burn a blockade runner that had run aground up to several thousand men.

The Second Battle of Fort Fisher near Wilmington, N.C., was the largest of these shore expeditions. Wilmington was the last Confederate port open to blockade runners who brought in desperately needed supplies, and Union forces had tried for years to close it but Fort Fisher's massive shore batteries had turned aside all attacks.

The battle (January 13–15, 1865) started with a two and a half day bombardment by more than 50 Union warships. On January 15, 8,000 Union soldiers, who had been landed earlier, attacked the land face of the fort, while at the same time 1,600 sailors and 400 Marines attacked the fort's sea face.

While the naval force was repulsed, the Union infantry breached the fortifications, forcing the 1,900-man Confederate garrison to retreat.⁵ Approximately 900 Union soldiers and 380 sailors and Marines were killed or wounded in the attack.⁶

The Spencer Repeating Rifle has been covered so much in the gun press and is so well known that I don't believe it is necessary to go into its history and development here.

A lever-action repeater chambered for the (then) new rimfire cartridges it featured a manually cocked, outside hammer and a tubular magazine in the buttstock that held seven rounds, it was the most popular and practical repeating rifle to see service during the Civil War. The Navy first tested the Spencer in 1861 and regarded it favorably.

The Spencer Company's first federal contract came from the Navy Department. Reportedly it was obtained not so much because of the obvious superiority of the Spencer system, but rather the fact that one of the directors of the new company, Charles Cheney, was the Boston neighbor and friend of Gideon Welles, the Secretary of the Navy. In June of 1861 the Spencer Company received a contract from the Navy for 700 rifles fitted with brass handled, sword type bayonets.⁷ Like the Plymouth Rifle's bayonet, these had long blades and could do double duty as cutlasses if necessary.

Known as the U.S. Navy Rifle, Model 1860, it was chambered for the .56-56 Spencer cartridge, which consisted of a brass, rimfire case .875" long that contained a 350-grain lead bullet that was propelled to approximately 1200 fps.⁸

Between August and September 1863, the Navy took delivery of 300 additional Spencer rifles. In August 1867, Roza Shanina, already an accomplished sniper in 1944 at the age of 20, commanded a squad of female snipers, who proved to be the scourge of the German army. These courageous young women used a rifle that was state-of-the-art at the time, the Mosin 91/30 PU.

These rifles performed admirably on the Eastern front, notably at Stalingrad, as you will see in "Enemy at the Gate", which comes free with your Mosin 91/30 PU Sniper rifle.

seven additional Model 1860 rifles were delivered to the Portsmouth Navy Yard, making the total purchased by the Navy 1,003 rifles.

While the Spencer generally proved popular with the sailors to whom it was issued, there were problems. In June 1864 the commander of the USS Ella, a ship of the Potomac Flotilla, asked that he be allowed to turn in his Spencer rifles and replace them with Plymouth rifles. He stated that accidental discharges with the Spencers had resulted in two sailors being killed and two more wounded.⁹ Unfortunately there were no Plymouth Rifles available (see above).

The Federal government gave the Army preference when it came to placing orders and supplying weapons, and the Navy was at the far end of a long supply pipeline and had to get by with whatever was available. One thousand Spencer rifles did not even come close to solving the Navy's small arms shortages and, as was the U.S. Army at this time, the seagoing service began buying whatever weapons were available and standardization be damned.

During our fratricidal conflict, the Navy had additional duties thrust upon it. Besides maintaining the blockade of Southern ports and hunting down Confederate commerce raiders such as the infamous CSS Alabama, they had to develop tactics and ships for a completely new aspect of "naval" war—river warfare.

The Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio and Tennessee Rivers were vital arteries of trade, communication and transportation for the Confederacy, and early on, the Union launched campaigns to gain control of the western river system. Flotillas of river gunboats were built and manned by Navy crews and Marines. This expansion of the Navy's scope of action resulted in ever greater demand for rifles as river gunboat crews often engaged in skirmishes with Confederate land forces along the rivers with small arms rather than ship-mounted cannons.

U.S. Navy Carbine, Model 1862

In September 1848, Christian Sharps was issued a patent for a breechloading rifle of his own design. The Sharps rifle featured a vertical dropping block action, operated by a lever that also served as a trigger guard. It was percussion fired, with an external, manually operated hammer. The action was not only strong, but limited the release of powder gases when the gun was discharged, a perennial problem with most non-cartridge firing breechloaders.

The first sales were made to the U.S. Army in 1854, but it was not until the Civil War erupted that the Federal government purchased tens of thousands of Sharps rifles and (especially) carbines.

While the Sharps Rifle Manufacturing Company bore his name, Christian Sharps was not the company's owner. In 1853 he left the firm and, with partners Ira Ebby and Nathan Bolles, formed C. Sharps and Company of Philadelphia. In 1860 William Hankins joined the company as superintendent, bringing badly needed additional capital to the business. In 1861 Ebby and Bolles left the firm, and Hankins became a full partner. Two years later the company's name was changed to Sharps & Hankins.

In 1862 the company offered a breechloading carbine to the U.S. Navy. Christian Sharps' inventive genius resulted in the new carbine having a number of relatively modern features. First was a separate firing pin contained within the receiver rather than on the nose of the hammer; a hammer rebound safety mechanism that kept the hammer face from contacting the firing pin unless the trigger was pulled; and lastly, a spring-loaded catch in the frame that automatically extracted the cartridge and prevented forward movement of the cartridge case when the breech was open.

The Sharps & Hankins Carbine was a manually-operated single-shot carbine chambered for the .56-52

U.S. NAVY CARBINE, MODEL 1862 (SHARPS & HANKINS)

Caliber:	.56-52 Spencer
Overall length:	35.6 inches

Spencer cartridge. In operation, pressing a release located on the bottom of the frame/receiver behind the trigger allowed the shooter to pull the trigger guard lever downwards, which slid the barrel along the forward extension of the frame. As it moved forward, the spent cartridge case was extracted and could be manually removed or by tilting the rifle to the side and letting it fall free. A new cartridge was inserted and the trigger guard pulled closed, sliding the barrel back and sealing the breech. The hammer was cocked and the carbine fired.

As beggars can't be choosers, the Navy placed an order for 5,600 carbines, designating them the U.S. Navy Carbine, Model 1862, while the U.S. Army purchased an additional 600 for issue to cavalry units. The Navy carbine can be distinguished by a leather sleeve that fits over the full length of the barrel and was fastened at the breech.

This was done in the mistaken belief that it would protect the carbine from the corrosive effects of salt water and the sea air. In fact the leather tended to absorb moisture, aggravating corrosion of the weapons.

During the war, Marine contingents onboard Navy ships—even those whose arms racks contained Jenks, Spencer and Sharps & Hankins carbines and rifles—were generally equipped with rifled muskets. These included the Springfield Models 1855 and 1861 and, depending on supply, the British P-53 Enfield.

Before the war the U.S. Navy had maintained squadrons around the world: Atlantic Squadron, Brazil Squadron, West African Squadron, Mediterranean Squadron, Pacific Squadron and Asiatic Squadron, while individual vessels patrolled the coasts and rivers of East Africa and South East Asia.

With the end of the Civil War, the Navy was drastically reduced in size—the West African and Mediterranean squadrons were disbanded—although the scope of their duties remained unchanged: the suppression of piracy, protecting American diplomatic interests, American ships, merchants and missionaries. "Protecting" usually meant showing the locals who had a jaundiced view of western colonialism, business practices and religions, the error of their ways.

While this sometimes meant bombarding coastal villages, towns and fortresses, the more common practice was landing parties of bluejackets and Marines.

The first major land operation of the post-Civil War Navy took place in Korea. With the arrival of Japanese and Western traders in the 19th century, Korean rulers tried to prevent the opening of the country to foreign trade by closing the borders, earning Korea its nickname of the Hermit Kingdom. Foreign sailors who had the misfortune to be shipwrecked on Korean territory were often imprisoned or executed.

The U.S. sent a delegation to Korea in 1871 in an attempt to establish trade and diplomatic relations with the country. They were also tasked with ascertaining the fate of the crew of a U.S.-flagged merchant ship, the General Sherman, that had attempted to trade (illegally as it were) in Korea in 1866 and had been captured, destroyed and its entire crew executed.

On July 1, 1871, five ships of the U.S. Asiatic Squadron, the cruisers USS Alaska and Colorado and gunboats USS Monocacy and Palos and the sloop USS Benicia, with the U.S. delegation onboard, anchored off Gangwha Island. Korean officials ordered them to leave. When they did not, Korean forts opened fire on them, although apparently no damage was done.

The U.S. commander, Rear Adm. John Rodgers, demanded an official apology. When none was forthcoming, after 10 days 500 sailors and 150 Marines were landed and, supported by several 12-pound howitzers manned by the Marines and the guns of the USS Monocacy, proceeded to capture and destroy five Korean fortifications.

When the smoke had settled, the Koreans were in retreat after suffering 243 dead and 20 captured, while American losses totaled three sailors dead and 10 sailors

U.S Navy Carbine, Model 1867

During the Civil War a Remington employee, Joseph Rider, designed a breechloading carbine known as the First Model or "Split Breech," which the firm attempted, unsuccessfully, to sell to the Union army.

After the war, Remington's engineers redesigned the action so the rotating breechblock was locked in place by an extension of the external hammer as it fell. It had few parts, was rugged in the extreme, reliable and simple to use. Dubbed the "Remington Rolling Block" it went on to become one of the most popular breechloading rifles of the latter half of the 19th century.

The Navy was looking to replace the collection of rifles and carbines left over from the war with a standardized, breechloading long arm and expressed interest in the Split Breech carbine. In 1866, it was made aware of the improved Rolling Block carbine, and after a series of trials, placed an order for 5,000 of them known as the U.S. Navy Carbine, Model 1867.

With its short, handy overall length and light weight, the Model 1867 carbine was thought to be perfect for shipboard use. It had a 23.25-inch barrel, half-length forearm held by a single barrel band with a sling swivel and a sling swivel on the heel of the buttstock. It was chambered for the .50-45 Carbine, which used a rimmed copper case with an internal bar-type primer (later Benet inside primer) 1.34 inches long loaded with a 385-grain lead bullet that 45 grains of blackpowder propelled to approximately 1050 fps.

Between July 1868 and February 1869, the carbines were delivered to the New York Navy Yard and were issued to ships including the USS Colorado (see above), Franklin and Guerriere.

Before landing on Gangwha Island, Capt. McLane Tilton, commander of the USS Colorado's Marine contingent, requested that their Model 1861 Springfield rifled muskets be replaced with Remington carbines from the ship's arms room. The firepower provided by these cartridge-firing breechloaders made short work of the Korean troops, many of whom were still using matchlock muskets.¹⁰

There was also a Model 1867 Navy Cadet Rifle that use same action and cartridge as the Carbine, but was fitted with a 32.5-inch barrel, full-length forearm and accepted a socket bayonet. In 1868, the Navy purchased 498 of them for use by the midshipmen at the Navy Academy in Annapolis where they saw use through the 1890s. As they were never used in combat, they are outside the scope of this article.

In Part II of this report (10/20 issue), we will examine the blackpowder rifles used by the Navy and USMC from the 1870s through the end of the 19th century and see how the Navy recognized much earlier than the Army the practicality of the magazine-fed repeating rifle.

6 The casualties suffered by the Navy may have been the result of the their weapons. The majority of the sailors were armed with pistols and cutlasses as insufficient rifles were available.
7 <http://www.civilwarguns.com/spencer1.html>
8 Some sources state the Model 1860 was chambered for the .56-52 Spencer but being the two cartridges were more less dimensionally and ballistically identical, and were interchangeable, I believe the point is moot.

By David M. Fortier

At times it seems as if the world is awash in ARs. While the AR-15 remains one of my favorite platforms, there are many other interesting and effective designs out there. One of these is Fabrique Nationale de Herstal's SCAR rifle. A reliable piston-operated design, it's both accurate and easy to operate. It was developed fairly recently and can easily host a wide range of accessories thanks to its 1913 rail sections. It's a good rifle right out of the box, but much like the AR-15, it is possible to make it even better. By carefully selecting aftermarket components you can improve the looks, handling and performance of the SCAR rifle. Tweaking a rifle with aftermarket parts is after all as American as Mom, apple pie and baseball. So I thought for this issue we'd spend time improving FNH's SCAR rifle, and Magpul's M-LOK system along the way too.

Currently there are a number of companies making aftermarket parts and accessories for the SCAR. Some of these are better than others. For this issue I decided to take a look at SCAR-specific parts and accessories offered by three companies: Midwest Industries, Geissele and Kinetic Development Group. When I began my selection process I was familiar with two of the three. Midwest Industries is a familiar face well known for its diverse line of parts and accessories. They are known for offering quality parts at a reasonable price. Geissele is very popular and highly respected and is best known for aftermarket triggers, but they also make a slew of other products. Kinetic Development Group though was a new name to me. I'm sure it is to many of you as well. It's a name you'll want to know, though, as they have many interesting and exciting things headed to market that reach far beyond the SCAR.

Let's begin by taking a brief look at the rifle in question. Fabrique Nationale de Herstal's SCAR rifle series was developed for, and won, the hard-fought SOF Combat Assault Rifle competition, which began in 2003. The result of FNH's work was not just one rifle, but two models capable of easily being changed between multiple calibers to fill multiple roles. The SCAR-L chambers the standard US military 5.56x45mm cartridge while the slightly larger SCAR-H chambers the 7.62x51mm NATO. Both models incorporate a quick-change barrel system. This allows the SCAR-L to be easily fitted with a 10-, 14- or 18-inch barrel. The SCAR-H can be fitted with 13-, 16- and 20-inch barrels. Designated the Mk16 Mod 0 by the U.S. military, the SCAR-L was slated to replace the M4A1 carbines, Mk18 CQBRs and Mk12 rifles in SOCOM service. Its bigger brother the SCAR-H, designated Mk17 Mod 0, was slated to replace the M14 and Mk11 sniper rifles fielded by SOCOM. Both models are designed to fulfill a variety of roles from close quarter combat to precision rifle. It's also possible, by swapping bolts, barrels and magazines, to chamber this family in other calibers.

The SCAR family might not be revolutionary in design, but it incorporates many lessons learned throughout several decades. Unlike previous U.S. military rifles, the SCAR was developed from the outset to accept modern mission-essential items such as optics, IR lasers/illuminators, white lights, vertical grips, bipods and more. Through a change in technology, barrel life has been improved compared to the M16 series. The design is also intended to be more reliable and tolerant to dirt, debris and fouling while also being more user-friendly. While not perfect, for example, the SCAR-L model was dropped from U.S. service; the design brings a number of excellent features together into one package. Today the SCAR is fielded by not only U.S. SOCOM, but the military forces of some 20 countries as well.

Once the military SCAR was in production, FNH didn't waste any time in developing semi-automatic commercial versions for the U.S. market. The 5.56x45mm model was dubbed the SCAR 16S while the larger 7.62x51mm model was named the SCAR 17S. Today both of these models are very popular with American shooters. Whether for self-protection, competition, hunting or recreational shooting, the SCAR 16S and 17S are accurate and reliable pieces

Fabrique Nationale de Herstal's SCAR rifle series was developed for, and won, the SOF Combat Assault Rifle competition that began in 2003. The commercial 16S variant soon followed.

The SCAR 16S, seen here, is an accurate and reliable semi-automatic rifle chambered for 5.56x45mm. Its 17S big brother is chambered for 7.62x51mm NATO.

One great upgrade for the SCAR is the addition of a Geissele Super SCAR trigger. While not inexpensive, the improvement is well worth the cost.

A look inside the SCAR's lower receiver. Don't be intimidated, if you watch the instructional video and take your time the trigger swap is fairly straightforward and painless.

be aware of. So let's take a look at a few that stand out from the crowd.

Geissele Super SCAR

When I first tested a SCAR 16S for SHOTGUN NEWS a little over six years ago, I commented negatively on the service-grade trigger with which it is fitted. I found it rather heavy. While I managed to average 4.2-inch groups at 500 yards, I would have preferred something a bit lighter. To give you an idea of the pull weight, FNH-USA lists it at 6.25 pounds. Six years down the road and I'm creeping up on 50. I need all the help I can get on the 500-yard line. Luckily I wasn't the only shooter who desired an improved aftermarket trigger for the SCAR. One company to respond was Geissele Automatics. Bill Geissele exploded onto the AR scene in 2004 when he started building National Match triggers. It wasn't long before certain units in the U.S. military took notice of his talent and today Geissele is synonymous with reliability. Few small companies garner the respect Geissele has earned with a distinctive look. While not inexpensive, they certainly invoke a pride of ownership.

Being Americans, we generally can't leave well enough alone, or at least not for long. American shooters love to tweak, customize and personalize their firearms. We desire to take what the factory has given us and improve upon its performance. The SCAR is no different and today there are a few notable accessories you'll want to

WHO IS KINETIC DEVELOPMENT GROUP?

WE INTERVIEW DARREN MELLORS TO FIND OUT

I was pleasantly surprised to find a familiar face behind Kinetic Development Group, Darren Mellors. Mellors served in the Canadian Forces (CF) as both an Infantryman and later was sent to the Canadian Forces School of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering where he specialized in weapons for land forces. He and Jesse Gomez started a company called Grenadier Precision before going to work at LWRC. They made quite a name for themselves both with their piston guns and their work with the 6.8x43mm SPC cartridge.

All good things must come to an end though, and Mellors, Gomez, Dave Loeser and AJ Lafferty left and started a new company, Kinetic Development Group. To find out a bit more about this interesting new company I spoke with Mellors, here's what he had to share, "We spent the summer of 2014 looking at the market, finding holes in the market, and we wanted to be respectful of our one year non-compete agreements. So we focused on designing and improving other high end markets. We decided to start with the SCAR, and HK416 and 417 but we later dropped the HK accessories because there just are not enough of those on the market to justify the investment.

"Starting a business is a long and laborious process of wearing every hat you can. Jesse Gomez was made an offer by Remington and he left. We found a new design engineer in Oregon named Chad Mason. The only piece we did not have was manufacturing. So we partnered with a major industry machine shop. During the surge on guns, their capacity to the industry for AR uppers and lowers was three thousand a week. That was the kind of capacity we needed to carry out our long term plans which of course is firearms manufacture. Not only AR, but combining the best features of the AR, AK, ACR, and SCAR rifles. Not revolutionary, but we want to build an affordable advanced concept rifle that nobody can complain about because it accommodates just about everything.

"In the mean time, we were very intrigued with what we could do with the M-LOK negative mounting surface with a quick detach system that can be incorporated into accessories or attaching small pieces of picatinny rail. It had to be stable, strong and affordable. It had to take tools, screws and user error out of the equation. We came up with Kinect, which is the first product that truly turns any rifle into a Lego set. Parts can be installed or removed in seconds, but they're strong enough to hold a grown man's weight. We also wanted a mounting solution for picatinny and came up with SIDELOK. Roll it on, it snaps on to the receiver at the perfect locking setting, and removes user error making it a true return-to-zero mount. With those products in the works and testing, we came out with the MREX M-LOK receiver extensions for the SCAR and the AR. We are just now launching SIDELOK and Kinect and have our Carbine in testing.

"If we aren't changing things, we are not happy. Not for the sake of change but to make things better. However, whenever you change something, you come up against huge opposition. Every product is a battle for the market's trust. It's an exciting but exhausting way to live. None of us would be happy with the bureaucratic constraints of a large company. None of us would be happy cranking out ARs with our name on it (we may just because we can), but that is not the engine that drives us."

So, in case you missed it, Kinetic will be coming out with a new rifle based upon proven design features in the near future. That is pretty exciting, and I look forward to seeing what they come up with. ©

A comparison between the Midwest Industries' SCAR Rail extension with 1913 rails (rear) and the Kinetic Development Group MREX M-LOK with Magpul's M-LOK system.

Both the Midwest Industries unit and Kinetic's MREX M-LOK (seen here) add much needed real estate to the front of the SCAR.

with their line of bombproof triggers. Today though Geissele does much more than just triggers. A rock star to AR aficionados, Bill Geissele has slowly but steadily expanded his operation. Today he offers an array of triggers, handguards, gas blocks, armorer's tools and more.

Of interest to us is his Super SCAR trigger. This is a handsome, albeit expensive piece that is highly recommended. It's a rugged piece that is made from high-quality materials and is handsomely finished. It's similar to Geissele's hugely popular SSA trigger and is a two-stage design. The first stage is roughly 2.5 pounds and the 2nd stage is approximately 1.5 pounds. Total pull weight comes in at a 4 pounds. This is a reduction in weight of 2.2 pounds from FNH's specification. It is non-adjustable.

Not only is it reliable, but it's also very user-friendly. I, for one, prefer a two-stage trigger over a single-stage. I find it easier to control, especially when it is as crisp as Geissele's Super SCAR. This trigger has a clean release and is smooth throughout its range. All in all it's a highly recommended upgrade that will make it easier for you to obtain the accuracy your SCAR is capable of. Will it make your rifle more accurate? No, but it will make it easier to shoot to its full potential.

How hard is it to install? Great question. It's certainly more complex than dropping in an aftermarket AR-15 trigger. But we're not talking rocket science, either. Yes, there are more parts to remove from the rifle and then reinstall. But this isn't the 1980s. So while well-written and illustrated instructions are included, you can also hop online and watch a step-by-step video tutorial on how to properly install it. If you go to <http://geissele.com/super-scar-trigger.html>

Bill Geissele himself will take you through the installation procedure. Or you can simply do a search on Youtube for Geissele Super SCAR trigger install. Even if you doubt your valor, just watch the video a few times. You'll quickly realize that a small flathead screwdriver, a punch and some effort is all which is required to perform this installation. Just take your time and do it in the exact sequence Bill tells you and you'll have zero problems.

The downside to the Super SCAR? The price of admittance. Not only was your rifle expensive but your aftermarket trigger is going to be expensive, too. How expensive? A wallet-flattening $325! Is it worth it? While that's a lot of bread, the Super SCAR is a heck of a trigger. In my humble opinion, yes it's money well-spent if you want to upgrade your rifle. Geissele gained a reputation for building top-notch triggers the old fashioned way. So while the Super SCAR is darned expensive, it's a great trigger.

Midwest Industries SCAR Rail Extension

Midwest Industries is best known for their diverse line of AR-15 accessories. This includes a variety of rail systems, iron sights, mounts and other small yet useful items. Plus they make a surprisingly large number of mounts and accessories for the AK family. While the AR and AK accessories get the glory, Midwest Industries has not forgotten other systems and makes accessories for the Galil/Golani, SKS, Kel-Tec, M14, Rem 700, SIG 556 and AR180B to name a few. Over the years Midwest Industries has earned an excellent reputation for building high-quality parts at an affordable price. In doing so, they have become very popular with blue collar shooters like myself.

In addition to all these goodies Troy Storch, the man behind Midwest Industries, also developed a line of rail extensions for the SCAR. One complaint many shooters have regarding the SCAR is the relatively short fore-end. This can quickly grow cramped if you mount accessories onto the OEM 1913 rails. Even if you don't mount accessories, it's less than ideal. So, Troy developed rail extensions that provide additional usable space. These are available with traditional 1913 rails, KeyMod or M-LOK slots. Midwest really has all the bases covered.

The example I chose to examine was their traditional style S1617 model with 1913 rails. This is manufactured from 6061 aluminum and hard coat anodized in either black or Flat Dark Earth. It only weighs eight ounces but gives you an additional six inches of useable space. The design features four 1913 rail sections and two anti-rotation QD sockets for push button sling swivels. Plus the rifle and gas system can still be easily cleaned and maintained with it installed.

Now when it comes to installing any rail extension, like this Midwest Industry unit or the Kinetic Development Group piece we'll get to in a minute, there are some specialized tools required. Namely you'll need a couple Torx and Allen wrenches, an inch-pound torque wrench and a heat gun, butane torch or lighter. You'll need these as you'll need to remove the barrel during the installation process. Don't let that worry you. The entire installation is simple and straightforward. The most difficult part is one factory bolt that is held in place by thread-locker. To break it loose, you'll need to heat it. I used an electric heat gun and applied heat for 60 seconds. That wasn't enough, so I hit it again for two minutes and it came right out. The process is basically just unscrewing bolts.

At first glance the ACR stock on the SCAR kind of reminds you of a big block Ford stuffed into a Chevy, it just doesn't seem right. But it works and works well.

You'll need the inch-pound torque wrench to properly tighten the fasteners locking the barrel into place during reassembly. This is important. Please note I said inch-pound and not foot-pound. We're not working on Dodges and Fords here. But if you can obtain the required wrenches, source of heat and a torque wrench installation is a breeze. It's actually easier than installing the trigger. Just take your time, follow directions and use plenty of heat. Then when reassembling, make sure to use a suitable thread-locker on the bolts. The end result is some much needed additional real estate. Price of the Midwest Industries piece is $199.95.

Kinetic Development Group MREX M-LOK

While I'm very familiar with Geissele and Midwest Industries, Kinetic Development Group was new to me. Or at least I thought it was. Once I delved into the company itself I was pleasantly surprised to find a few familiar faces. But I'll get into that in a bit. The important tidbit to understand is Kinetic Development Group has some interesting pieces available now and more on the way. They are definitely someone you'll want to be keeping an eye on, and have more to offer than just SCAR accessories.

Their MREX receiver extension is designed to add real estate to the front of your SCAR while at the same time being robust and light. It adds just 3.7 ounces and gives you an additional 6.5 inches of modular rail space. Keep in mind, the last place you want to add extra weight is to the front of your rifle. The MREX features a one-piece design and fits both 5.56x45mm and 7.62x51mm SCAR 16 and 17s with 16-plus inch barrels.

The unit is made using 6061-T6 aluminum and features a non-reflective Clear Type III hard-coat anodizing finish in either black or Magpul Flat Dark Earth. Features include a 1913 rail section at 12 o'clock and M-LOK slots at 3, 6 and 9 o'clock. Two QD sling sockets are incorporated. The MREX is designed to allow barrel removal with the extension still attached. The extension comes with installation Torx wrenches, screws and two Magpul polymer M-LOK accessory rails and Vibratite thread-locker. Installation is straightforward but again requires a heat gun or butane torch and an inch-pound torque wrench just like the Midwest Industries piece.

Fit and finish of the MREX is very nice. It's a good looking piece which, in my opinion, improves the feel of the rifle. I was very happy to be rid of the OEM 1913

Kinetic offers this QD sling socket cup that easily attaches to the rear of the receiver with two supplied screws. They also offer a unit for the front of the receiver.

Magpul's M-LOK system is a modular locking accessory mounting system developed as a modern replacement for the 1913 rail when utilized for mounting accessories.

The Kinect QD M-LOK mounting system is a quick detachable system compatible with Magpul's M-LOK slot system.

rail at 6 o'clock and the two short 1913 rails at 3 and 9 o'clock. Price of this piece is $299, so it's not cheap. That said, it's a well-made piece that complements the SCAR nicely. If you're looking for an extension rail this is certainly one to consider.

Kinetic Development Group SCAR Adaptable Stock Kit

If there is one thing many people don't like, it's the appearance of the OEM SCAR buttstock. It's often referred to as "das boot" because of its shape. Some worry about its durability because of the materials and design of it. After all, it does have a polymer hinge. So Kinetic designed an interesting alternative. They took an ACR-E stock system and developed an aluminum SCAR adapter. The end result slips easily in place of the OEM FNH stock, no tools required.

Features include: Seven adjustment positions, side-folding with spring-lock tension, adjustable cheek riser for use with iron sights or optics, QD sling socket that can be mounted on either side of the stock, watertight CR123

The Kinect QD M-LOK accessories snap easily into place locking securely into an M-LOK slot. If you want to remove it you simply depress two buttons and it releases.

M-LOK? A QUICK LOOK AT MAGPUL'S MOUNTING SYSTEM

Magpul's system is actually an evolution of their earlier MOE slot system introduced approximately nine years ago. Their MOE slot system, as its name implies, was standard on their MOE handguards. M-LOK refines and improves this system. Magpul describes it as a, "Modular locking accessory mounting system that is a direct attachment method for hard mounting accessories to a negative-space mounting point." As such, M-LOK is intended to be a stand-alone replacement for the MIL-STD-1913 rail system. Due to it being a slot, rather than a rail, M-LOK reduces weight. The system is designed to allow accessories to be mounted directly to the slots with no 1913 rail section required. However, as we live in an imperfect world, it is also backwards compatible and rail sections can be mounted. The M-LOK system is being released as a free licensed platform to allow greater compatibility of accessories among all manufacturers. This has led to a large number of handguard and accessory manufacturers introducing handguard/rail systems and other M-LOK accessories.

Because M-LOK is an evolution of Magpul's MOE slot system, it is compatible with synthetic/polymer and not just aluminum. So you don't need an expensive rail system to utilize M-LOK compatible accessories on your AR or shotgun. As an example, for ARs Magpul offers a variety of M-LOK compatible replacement handguards. These snap on in place of standard carbine or rifle handguards with no modifications required. They are available in carbine, Mid-Length and rifle length sizes. Plus they also offer their extended MOE SL handguard in carbine length. A simple yet effective alternative to the 1913 system, M-LOK continues to grow in popularity. © battery compartment, and a non-slip rubber butt pad. Better still, overall weight is reduced by about 1/4 pound. Length of pull can be adjusted from 11.3 to 14.2 inches.

While installation is simple, just be aware that to fold the stock you'll need to remove your OEM case deflector. This requires an Allen wrench and the removal of two screws. Other than that the ACR-E stock worked well and feels more robust than the OEM stock. The downside is the cheek riser isn't as high as the one on the factory stock. Plus the butt pad has less surface area. Price on this piece is $299.

Kinetic has developed their own QD system for mounting optical sights onto 1913 rails called the SIDELOK. It features a patented cam system to lock the mount securely in place.

Kinetic Development Group
SCAR QD Sling Mounts

While FNH equipped the SCAR with multiple sling mounting points, you are out of luck if you want to use QD sockets. So Kinetic developed an easy-to-install QD sling cup that mounts to the rear of the left side of the receiver. You simply remove two screws, align the cup and install the two supplied screws. Then you have a rear sling attachment point that accepts QD sling sockets. It's machined from solid 6061-T6 billet aluminum and limits the rotation of the swivel so your sling doesn't end up tangled. The finish is a non-reflective black Type III hard-coat anodizing. Price is $27.99.

The Geissele Super SCAR trigger was a welcome addition as was Kinetic's MREX M-LOK which proved very comfortable and useful.

For the front, Kinetic developed a robust piece that provides QD sling cups on each side of the rifle. It's machined from the same high-quality billet aluminum and mounts using OEM screws. It's an easy piece to add if you are also fitting your SCAR with a MREX extension. Just remember it requires removal of the barrel and thus an inch-pound torque wrench. Price is $49.

Kinetic Development Group
Kinect QD M-LOK Mounts

While the SCAR accessories are indeed interesting, Kinetic has a new line of products that will have broader appeal. Their Kinect QD M-LOK mounts are just as the name implies, a quick detachable system compatible with Magpul's M-LOK slot system. What do they do? Well, they snap easily into place locking securely into an M-LOK slot. If you want to remove it you simply depress two buttons and it releases, allowing it to pop off. So if you've grown accustomed to quick detachable accessories for 1913 rails, you can now have QD ease of use with the M-LOK system.

So how does it work? If you examine it you'll note there are two spring-loaded wedges in the base of a Kinect accessory. When you press the Kinect accessory down in the M-LOK slot, two small deployment triggers are depressed that release the wedges. These lock the Kinect piece securely to the rail. By depressing two releases, one on each end of the Kinect piece, the wedges are retracted and the piece can be removed. The end result is an interesting QD system for polymer and aluminum M-LOK slots.

Currently Kinetic is offering this system on three-slot and seven-slot 1913 rail sections, a Harris bipod mount, a Surefire Scout flashlight mount and a universal off-set mount. They have a number of other accessories that use this system in the works. Prices range from $49.99 to $64.99. This is a very interesting system that facilitates quickly removing and installing accessories onto M-LOK slots without the need for a tool. It's both fast and easy. How it holds up over the long haul to abuse and dirt,

A look at the SCAR tarted out with Kinetic's MREX M-LOK, SCAR Adaptable Stock Kit and Geissele Super SCAR trigger.

I cannot say. But if you've moved away from legacy 1913 Quad Rails to the M-LOK system you may want to look into what Kinetic is doing. It's also interesting to note Kinetic is looking for partners to license this system to.

Kinetic Development Group
SIDELOK Universal Scope Riser

While 1913 rails are falling out of favor for mounting accessories onto a rifle, they remain the standard for mounting optics. So Kinetic has developed their own QD system for mounting optical sights onto 1913 rails. Called the SIDELOK, it features a patented cam system to lock the mount securely to the 1913 rail. It does this without using tools or conventional side levers. Instead, there is a release lever at the front of the mount. To attach the mount you simply push the release lever in until it locks. Next, line the recoil lug up with a 1913 slot and rotate the mount down until it locks. The release lever will pop out when it locks into place. To remove, simply depress the release lever and lift the mount off. Kinetic claims the mount returns to zero, but I have not yet had a chance to properly test it. Currently Kinetic offers a Universal Scope Riser, an Aimpoint PRO/M4 mount and there is a T1 mount on the way. Pricing starts at $99.99 for the Universal Scope Riser. ©

Currently there is a HUGE Demand for Gunsmiths.

Millions of guns need fixing. Most of the old-time gunsmiths have retired and haven't been replaced because previously there wasn't a cost effective way to quickly train individuals to become gunsmiths and help them make money fast. This has created a chronic shortage and a huge opportunity for you.

Gunsmithing is a recession-proof business. Even in tough times people spend money to get their guns repaired or professionally cleaned. It's a lot cheaper than buying a new one and they still want and need them for hunting and self defense. You can even work part-time right from your home. Your one time investment in the course could provide you with a lifetime of income and opportunity.

Here's what you will learn in your FREE VIDEO!

How AGI's Professional Gunsmithing Course changed Robert Briskey's life: "Within one short year I opened up my own firearms repair and custom refinishing shop. My business is exceeding my dreams. The freedom I enjoy being self-employed is priceless. Without the opportunity that AGI's course offered, my dream would be just that, a dream." Robert T. Briskey, Battle Hen Armory

You don't have to wait to start gunsmithing! It only takes a relatively small investment to get started. As soon as you begin watching the videos you will be able to start making repairs. Anytime you run into a problem, you just pop in the DVD on the subject or model gun that you need information on and do a quick review.

Couldn't get a better recommendation: "I made the mistake of taking another cheaper gunsmithing course. I knew I made a mistake when I read in one of my lesson books that for further instructional help, go to the AGI website and get a DVD on the subject. When other schools are giving YOU that kind of acknowledgement, then you have to be the best." Gordon Fisher

PAINT IT!

A DIY AR-15 CAMOUFLAGE FINISH

Here's how to give your black gun a tasteful and attractive Krylon touch.

By James Tarr

In the last issue (9/1), I upgraded my personal Alexander Arms AR-15 with a new stock, handguards, grip and more, then figured it was the right time to give the gun another facelift. How? A do-it-yourself camo paint-job. Before this I had never spray painted a rifle, but I was confident I could do it. I could and did, and you can too.

Some people like black rifles, and some people love long guns with camouflage patterns. While most people stay on one side of the fence, at some point in their lives many pine for a camouflage pattern, but don't have the money for a custom dip or high-tech coating. Don't worry—you can get a custom camouflage finish on your AR for less than $30 and only a few hours of your time.

It's called spray paint.

Several years ago I was at a shooting match and one of the competitors was thinking about getting a camo finish on his gun. He asked me what I recommended. "Spray paint," I told him.

Tony Holdren and Dave Dunlap of PRI hold one of their uppers that has numerous coats of spray paint on it. This upper was recently back from Afghanistan where a member of an elite military unit was using it.

He was shocked, and maybe you are too. He could not believe you can just spray paint an AR. "And it still works? Wouldn't it gum it up?"

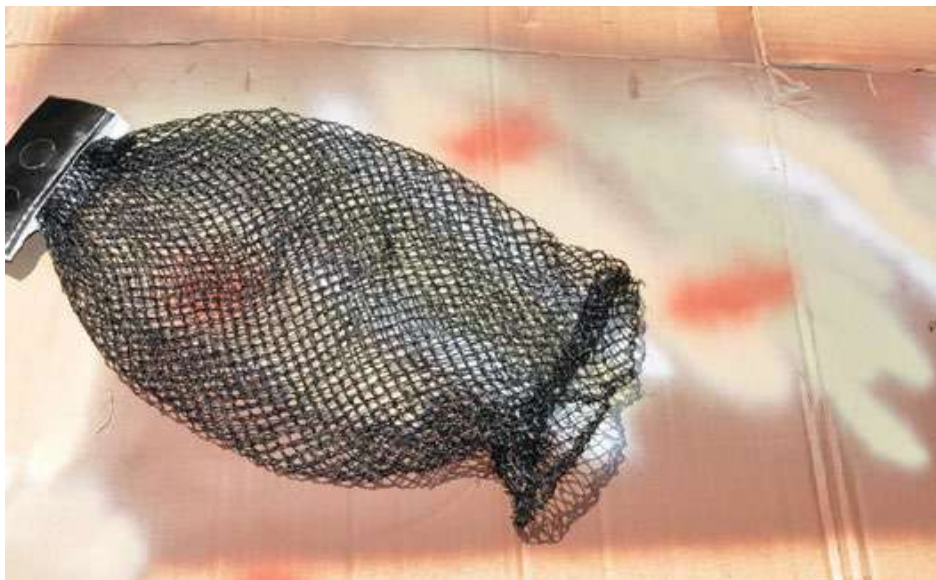

No. Provided the dust cover is already open, only the trigger and selector move on the exterior of an AR when you fire the gun. Remove parts when possible, or cover them with masking tape (or close the ejection port cover) and all the paint stays on the outside of the rifle. It's easy, cheap, and relatively quick. And the pros do it.

The first combat-zone rifle (actually it was just a top end) I saw in person which had been spray-painted was years ago while visiting Precision Reflex, Inc. (PRI). PRI makes high-end stuff, and this rifle had seen a lot of use with an elite military unit. In fact, it had seen so much use they'd shipped it back from Afghanistan for rebarrelling.

I actually found a photo of that top end while searching through old files. While you might not be able to tell from the photo, that tan camo finish is Tarr decided to do sample sprays of all the paint he'd purchased to see if it actually matched the color on the cap. Most of them were very close.

Tarr decided to do a test run of his camo pattern on a piece of cardboard. Here he is using his high-tech snakeskin patterner, otherwise known as a mesh apple bag.

Need a stencil? Look around! Many camo patterns use natural designs, and Tarr found these natural stencils—maple, pine, and cedar leaves—in his yard.

straight from a rattle can, and the rifle had several layers of spray paint on it—because under heavy use, all finishes, no matter how durable, wear. The great thing about spray paint is it is easy to reapply. If it's good enough for the rifles our elite deathstalkers in Afghanistan are using to shoot actual bad guys, it should be good enough for you.

First, let's look at the facts—if you want a camo finish on your rifle, you want it to appear different. It is solely for appearance. Nobody needs a new finish on their AR to keep it from rusting—except for the barrel, there's not much on the outside of the rifle that can rust. Whether you're painting it to match your hunting apparel or just want it to look cool doesn't matter.

Whether you disassemble your rifle into pieces or keep it together and paint it all at once, this is a rather simple project. Actually, you could probably take a complete rifle and with no prep work just spray the outside with whatever color(s) you like. Provided you remembered to close the dust cover and worked the charging handle once or twice before the paint dried, I have no doubt the gun would continue to work without any problems. But it wouldn't look that good, there'd be paint on the trigger, the stock might bind when you tried to adjust it, and there's a good chance that with no prep work your paint job wouldn't last very long. So here are a few tips to get the most out of your rattle can paint job.

Equipment

You do not need a $30 can of high-tech uber-coating to give your rifle a makeover. What you need are flat or matte paints in whatever colors tickle your fancy. If you

This is the original test camouflage pattern, on cardboard. This dry run helped Tarr better plan for when he'd be applying the scheme to his rifle.

If you start with an already assembled rifle (as opposed to parts) the first thing you're going to want to do is take off everything you don't want to paint.

While it may be unnecessary, Tarr decided that to ensure the highest chance of success he would rough up the rifle with a sanding pad to help the paint adhere better.

After sanding the rifle Tarr sprayed it with brake cleaner, then wiped it down with a new shop rag to ensure the metal was bare of all lint, dirt, and grease.

After sanding, Tarr used masking tape to cover anything on the rifle he didn't want painted. Note the sexy distressed look to the metal from the sanding.

Lowe's. I bought one can of every color paint I might want to throw on my rifle, at $4-$6 a can. I ended up with 6 cans of Rust-Oleum, one Krylon, and one Dupli-Color. Three of them were flat auto primer, simply because I liked the colors.

Many stores are also selling textured spray paints that have the equivalent of sand mixed into the paint. When you spray it onto your kitchen walls for example it gives a pebbled look to the finished product. While it may be tempting to use those on your rifle, just remember that those paints are not designed to be handled and the grains will quickly wear off, leaving pits in the paint.

If you've ever painted a room of your house, you know that you do not mix latex paints with oil base paints. The same goes with spray-painting your AR—stick to one kind of paint. The good news is that almost all of the spray paint on the market is acrylic.

You may or may not want to buy a can of clear coat for a finishing protective layer for your rifle. I did, and highly recommend it. More on that later.

LANCER ONE-PIECE ADAPTIVE MAGWELL: PERFECT...ALMOST.

I admit I am often amused at the tactical crowd discovering tools and techniques developed by the competition crowd. The tactical types have a knee-jerk reaction—anything coming out of the competition world “will get you killed.” Until they actually use some of said techniques and equipment and realize that (for example) long handguards really are very functional.

One of the most recent equipment upgrades that has migrated from the competition world to the tactical environs is the oversize magazine well. First for their handguns, but now for their ARs. And to be honest, the standard AR-15 magazine well could use a bit of flare.

Enter Lancer.

Known primarily for their excellent L5AWM and L7 magazines for AR rifles, Lancer has also produced a lower receiver with interchangeable mag wells (from small to competition huge), but their most recent endeavor has been “drop-in” oversize mag wells for Mil-Spec rifles. They first came out with a two-piece model, and most recently introduced a one-piece model that is designed to fit any Mil-Spec lower receiver with a standard “winter” (i.e. pivoting) trigger guard.

The Lancer One-Piece Adaptive Magwell is designed to be a drop-in upgrade to all Mil-Spec ARs, that vastly increases the size of the magazine well opening.

The Lancer mag well works with standard “winter” trigger guards as well as Magpul oversize trigger guards, although the Magpuls may be very tight.

The mag well is a simple one-piece design that slides over the front of your rifle's magazine well. It has a spring loaded detent that snaps into the hole your trigger guard used to occupy at the back of the magazine well, and there is a spot about half an inch lower on the Lancer piece where your trigger guard is now designed to connect. The end result will have your trigger guard angled downward slightly, but I don't think it looks bad.

want your rifle to blend with nature you should choose colors that are found in the environment. Then again, you could want to introduce your 9-year-old daughter to shooting—if she wants a custom pink, red, or yellow AR, you can help her paint the rifle herself.

I have read of people using both Krylon and Rust-Oleum brand spraypaints for their camo jobs, and heard good things about Aervoe paints, although that brand is more expensive. In gathering equipment for this article I trekked to the local auto parts store, paint supply store (it was right next door to the auto parts), Wal-Mart, and Tarr's base coat was Rust-Oleum Flat Brown, and to apply it he hung the rifle in his garage. Hanging the rifle allowed him better access to all the nooks and crannies of an AR.

Tarr taped up the windows on the PMags, and covered all the area that would be inside the rifle's mag well. Paint high up on the mags might make them bind.

Prepping Supplies

Again, you can spray paint a dirty, greasy rifle and most of the paint will stay just where you put it. But assuming most of you don't want to spend time on a camo paint job that's just going to peel off in a few days, you'll probably want to prep the exterior of your rifle. For that you will want to rough up the surface so the paint will adhere better. While I had sandpaper in the basement for this project, I bought some 3M sanding pads from a local paint supply store.

At the auto parts store I also bought several cans of brake cleaner. While you can wipe the grease and sanding dust off with acetone-soaked rags, it's much easier to just spray a rifle down with brake cleaner. Heck, that's how I clean my Glock every two years, whether it needs it or not.

You will also need masking tape. I bought the old fashioned off-white type which served humans well for thousands of years before somebody figured out that coloring it blue or green and calling it "painter's tape" meant they could charge more money for it.

Stencils

Most camo patterns involve, well, patterns, and you have to decide ahead of time what kind of look you want

Tarr also painted the BCM Kinesthetic Angled Grip and the Trijicon RMR mount. He found it was quicker and easier to cover the red dot with tape than it was to remove it from the mount.

your rifle to have. Stencils can be items you spray paint around, or shaped holes that your spray through. Many people prefer using "natural" stencils. In my back yard I've got pine needles, branches from an arborvitae (cedar), althea and maple leaves, and daylily fronds, just to name a few.

Cardstock works great for if you want holes for spraying through (it stands up to paint better than standard paper). If you want hard-edged lines on your rifle and <<< Two different sized rubber shims are provided to eliminate rattle and fit inside the Lancer unit. Installation takes ten seconds if you're running a Mil-Spec "winter" trigger guard with push-button front attachment. If you're running a Magpul oversize trigger guard, you'll have to track down one of those tiny Allen wrenches for the front screw. Good luck with that.

The only problem I found with installation was that my rifle was wearing an old-school Magpul aluminum oversize trigger guard, and the rear of the trigger guard bound against the receiver when I pulled it down to insert it into the Lancer mag well and I could barely make it fit. Polymer trigger guards will have some flex and shouldn't have any issues.

The Lancer mag well doesn't add a lot of bulk but it adds a lot of functionality to a rifle. They will not function with Magpul Gen M3 PMags, however, because of the tab at the back of those magazines.

How much added value does this mag well provide? After two minutes of practice with the new mag well I was reloading at speed with my eyes closed—which for you tactical types is the same as reloading in the dark. It nearly doubles the size of the magazine well opening, with no downside. Well...only one downside.

The only real problem I found with this unit is that it will not allow you to seat Gen 3 Magpul PMags into your rifle. The Gen 3 PMags (officially the Gen M3) have a tab at the rear of the magazine that indexes at the back of your rifle's mag well to prevent overinsertion. With the Lancer unit in place they sit about half an inch too low and are not even close to engaging the mag catch. All other magazines (including all previous generation PMags) work just fine. My guess is that the people at Lancer will tell you their L5AWM magazine is a superior product to the PMag anyway...

If you have no Magpul Gen M3 PMags and no plans to use any, the Lancer mag well is for you. It adds only 2.145 ounces to the weight of the gun, adds very little bulk while providing a huge increase in functionality, and all for the relatively reasonable cost of $99.99. © specifically shaped patterns (such as small kidney shapes if you want to do your version of Multi-Cam) laying masking tape both sides of a sheet of wax paper and then cutting out shapes works well. The resulting cutouts are flexible enough that when you lay them on the rifle they follow the curves.

Everybody doing camo patterns these days seems to be using vehicle cargo nets to lay down Kryptek-type irregular diamond shapes in their patterns. I jumped on that bandwagon and that's what I wanted as well, but the one-inch or so openings in cargo nets are larger than I preferred. The solution came to me as I was standing in my kitchen. There on the counter was a bag of apples, fresh from the grocery store. The bag was a nylon net, the squares in it much smaller than those found in vehicle cargo nets, but exactly the same shape. Bingo!

Plan Your Paint, Paint Your Plan

The very first thing you need to do before you touch your rifle is to plan your pattern. That way you'll know what color paints to buy. I've read that you should start with your darkest color and work your way light. I've also heard the reverse. The fact of the matter is that you need to figure out what pattern you want, and once you do that it is time to figure out in what order you need to apply your paint colors to get your desired pattern.

The color you want the least of is the one you lay down first.

This was not the first time in my life I've used spray paint. And anyone who is old enough to own an AR doesn't need me to lecture him or her on the dangers of paint fumes. Sniff enough of them and you might start voting Democrat. I could have done all my painting in my basement, but instead I did it all in my garage and in my backyard simply because the lighting was better. It had nothing to do with my fiancée complaining about the smell.

To start I dragged a big piece of cardboard into my backyard. The first thing I did was develop carpal tunnel syndrome shaking all the cans until they rattled, then shaking them some more. I then sprayed a palm-sized blob on the cardboard with each can to see if the color on the cap matched the actual paint. I found that most were close, but a few were a bit lighter, and one a shade darker.

I also found that two of the three auto primers didn't cover well at all, for whatever reason. And this was on absorbent cardboard. Good thing I bought extra colors. Very quickly I learned that it took more than one pass to make a complete coat. Admittedly cardboard has a different texture and is more absorbent than aluminum, but I didn't have sheets of aluminum lying around to experiment on.

Once I'd tested out every color, I decided to do a trial run of the pattern I had in my head. Doing it on cardboard meant that I could throw down the next color just as soon as the paint was dry to the touch, as I didn't have to worry about uncured paint layers later peeling. The total test pattern only took me about twenty minutes.

I'm very happy that I tried out the pattern I'd envisioned on a slab of cardboard before touching my rifle with paint. Not that I wouldn't have been happy with the end result, but it wasn't perfect. After eyeballing my test pattern I realized that I wanted more green and a little more gray on the middle layer.

The cardboard also allowed me to experiment with the net, seeing how holding the can closer and farther away affected the result. The test also gave me an opportunity to try out the clear coat many people recommend. Even on the more absorbent cardboard the matte clear coat gave me a shinier finish, which I liked. It should also make for a longer lasting paint job.

It never occurred to me as I planned my camo pattern or even as I stared at the test pattern I made, but my thirteen-year-old son called it—the apple net produced an honest-to-goodness snakeskin pattern.

Get to Work

Next, you have to decide whether or not you want to take apart your gun to paint it. If you are starting with a pile of parts and stripped receivers that's a little easier decision, but most people will be eyeballing a completed rifle at the start.

Disassembling a rifle and painting it in pieces will give you better coverage in the nooks and crannies, but is a lot more work. Plus, there is always the chance of scratching your new paint job as you reassemble the pieces. As my Alexander Arms carbine was already assembled, I left it that way, but I did take off the sights, optic, handguard covers and angled foregrip.

The first work I did was take one of my newly purchased 3M sanding pads and start to rough up the exterior of the rifle in hopes that it would make the paint adhere better. I soon found that I needed the roughest sanding pad, as aircraft aluminum is harder to scour than wood. Actually, after sanding it, the rifle had a pretty cool “been there, done that” distressed look to it. I also sanded the MFT pistol grip and Magpul stock.

After sanding I hung the rifle in my garage with some twine and wiped it off with a fresh shop rag, hosed it down with most of a can of brake cleaner, and wiped it down again with a new fresh rag. Then I

Tarr wanted a camo pattern on his rifle that, while predominantly tan, would work well in most environments. Here it is compared to the current in-fashion, all-terrain camo, Multi-Cam.

Tarr's pattern involved a lot of layers, and as a result his pattern has a lot of depth and complexity to it.

covered up everything I didn't want painted with masking tape—selector, bolt release, trigger, magazine release, and forward assist. I also taped off the magazine well, muzzle, and the slot for the charging handle. Make sure the dust cover on the ejection port is closed.

If you have a collapsible carbine stock, you have to decide what you're going to do, as that stock slides on the buffer tube, and might already be a tight fit. Do you not paint the buffer tube at all, or take off the stock and paint the entire tube? I moved the stock to the furthest point back I would ever likely use it, and painted everything (stock and tube) with it in that position.

What about magazines and accessories? I grabbed four PMags, two of them with TTI +5 aluminum basepads, and taped up their tops and windows. I taped up every part of the magazine that wouldn't protrude from the gun so they didn't bind in the mag well. I also wanted the mount for my Trijicon RMR to match, and because taping up the sight was quicker and easier than taking it off the mount, I did that.

Painter Up!

When it comes time to paint you can hang the rifle/parts or lay them on cardboard. For the initial base coat, I decided to hang it in my garage again. This is because there are so many nooks and crannies on an AR. My base coat was Rust-Oleum Flat Brown. It took a lot of work and several coats until I was satisfied.

If it's been a while since you've used spray paint remember to always keep the can moving, and start spraying before you're on the rifle. Keep the nozzle at least eight inches away from the rifle, although practicing ahead of time like I did will teach you where you want the can to be, close or far, depending on the color and stencil being used at the time.

Considering my pattern called for at least three layers of paint, I didn't want any of them too thick. If your paint is running, you're laying it on too heavy—I know, because I have a long history of that. And metal doesn't soak up

"Our visits with our sellers are always pleasant, I look forward to every flight."

Missouri's Flying Gun Runner

The gun runners of old used sailing ships or steam locomotives to move their wares. Today, there is a Class 3 dealer in Missouri who uses something a lot faster. If you are selling a machine gun collection, Midwest Tactical Inc., will come to you: by air. Frank Goepfert, MWT founder and president, owns and operates a Cirrus SR22 airplane. Since two other company employees are also pilots, MWT can cover the map to meet with customers and close deals on machine gun collections.

Nothing else in the gun business is as regulated as Title II arms like machine guns, suppressors and short-barreled guns. A machine gun dealer must know federal and state regulations inside and out, along with knowing current market values and the players in the trade. MWT is staffed with NFA specialists who deal with trusts, estates, National Firearms Act (NFA) transfers and Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms (ATF) regulations.

Buyers for machine guns tend to be widely scattered, as do sellers. By its very nature, the NFA business is a national business. Having the ability to go meet the customers and see the merchandise is a huge plus. There are only about 186,000 transferable machine guns on the NFA registry, and there are at most only a few hundred transferable machine guns for sale at any time. As a result, prices of NFA arms have risen to levels once thought impossible. Sellers, especially heirs of war veterans, may have no idea the value of their guns.

Frank originally pursued his private pilot license as a hobby, but the ability to cover ground in a fraction of the time needed to drive soon started to pay dividends for the business. "Meeting customers face to face is always a pleasure," Frank says. "Gun people tend to be nice people with whom we share common interests, including flying. Our visits with our sellers are always pleasant, I look forward to every flight."

MWT is licensed to deal in machine guns and standard Title I firearms such as pistols, rifles and shotguns. In Addition, MWT holds a Type 07 license with SOT in Missouri. While machine guns are the focus of the business, if you also have Title I firearms to sell, MWT can purchase the entire collection.

MWT does the paperwork and arranges shipment of the guns after ATF approves the transfer. ATF can take months to approve a transfer, even to a dealer. MWT still pays up front. Most customers only have one or two machine guns to sell, and small purchases still make up the bulk of the business. Those buys of fewer than five machine guns can usually be made using pictures and forms, without the need for a visit.

A growing number of purchases are collections and Federal Firearms License (FFL) closeouts that often benefit from a visit to the customer, especially those sellers who are not familiar with machine guns or NFA procedures. MWT will travel to meet the customers and offer an honest assessment. On more than one occasion, the customers were heirs of estates that involved an FFL business.

There are a lot of hoops to jump through with ATF on FFL liquidations, and the specialists on the MWT payroll can handle them smoothly, dealing with local ATF field offices and the NFA branch. If you are not looking to sell an entire collection, MWT can broker your guns. The fee is 10%, and MWT does all the paperwork, making life a lot simpler for the seller.

The NFA business is unlike any other retail model. The inventory is scarce and cannot be ordered up from a local big box store. MWT can only get inventory from customers who are willing to sell, so they make selling easy.

Frank Goepfert welcomes your call if you are thinking of selling, or want a verbal appraisal on the current market value for your machine guns. Discussions about planning for future estate or business liquidations are also welcome. NFA transfers are serious business which require knowledge and expertise. The MWT team will make selling your machine guns both enjoyable and lucrative.

excess paint no matter how much you sweet-talk it. Once I didn't see any basic black showing through the brown, I let the rifle completely dry. That took several hours and a fan.

For the rest of my painting I laid the rifle down on cardboard as it would give me more control, plus I was only painting one side of the rifle at a time. I did this in the backyard on my deck so I had the best light source available. I sprayed wide stripes of Rust-Oleum Army Green (which is lighter and brighter than it sounds) and narrow stripes of Rust-Oleum Light Gray Auto Primer diagonally across the rifle, more or less following the angle of the pistol grip on both sides.

When I was done the rifle looked hideous to me, but I knew I was far from the finished product and had at least one more coat to do. Since I was working with diagonal stripes I made sure when painting the magazines to keep the stripes going in the same direction.

For my third layer I laid the apple net bag over the rifle one section at a time and sprayed Rust-Oleum Khaki and Sand through it, covering most of the rifle. I wasn't happy with how the Khaki was covering and ended up using

You have to decide how much of the buffer tube you want to paint. Tarr positioned the stock at the furthest point from the receiver it would likely ever be before painting.

Instead of painting the black BCM KMR rail covers he had on his rifle, Tarr just bought some tan ones because it was easier.

more Sand, even though it was lighter than I wanted—but that worked out fine, as you'll see later.

The result was a mostly tan rifle with a lot of "snake-skin" patterning on it, but I found that it was a little bright and flat for my taste. To add some depth to the pattern I gave it a few light accents of the base color, Flat Brown, both through the net and without at extreme distance for a little speckling. I also gave the rifle just a few squirts of Rust-Oleum Deep Forest Green, which otherwise I found too dark to use.

The final result of my pattern was not bad at all, considering this was the first time I had ever painted a rifle much less planned a camouflage pattern. The rifle was mostly tan, with darker spots and big sections of snakeskin. It was still a little brighter than I liked, but overall I was happy.

Then I applied the clear coat. Oh baby.

For my clear coat I used Rust-Oleum Matte Clear Enamel. As it was enamel rather than acrylic I waited several days to apply it. I put two coats of the clear enamel on the rifle, and in my opinion it turned a "not bad" camo pattern into a "WOW" camo pattern. The clear coat didn't just provide a hard protective layer on my rifle, it darkened up the pattern by at least one shade, and really made the colors pop out. Before the clear coat I thought the rifle was a little light and bright, but afterward it was just right. It also gave it a very faint gloss, which might not even be visible in most of the photos as the finish is still flat enough to soak up a lot of the light from my camera flashes.

I did find that the clear coat doesn't work as well on polymer as it does metal. Three coats of it on my polymer PMags didn't give me as much shine and color change as two coats did on the rifle itself. If the magazines look lighter than the rifle, that's why.

Prior to painting, I had some black BCM KMR rail covers on the handguard. I could have painted them, but instead I just got some tan rail covers. BCM also makes some in OD Green, which wouldn't look too bad either with my color scheme.

The End of the Beginning

If you totally screw up your painting, guess what? Whatever store you bought your paint from, they sell paint stripper. Scrub off your mistakes with paint stripper and a nylon brush, and start all over. Tired of a camo paint job from a few years ago? Strip it off. That's the beauty of a rattle can DIY paint job. No, it won't last as long or be as durable as a high-tech coating, but putting a one-of-a-kind camo pattern you designed on your own rifle has its own benefits.

Apart from taking my rifle apart to start, I did every kind of prep work possible and took my time, and still I don't think I had much more than four hours of work into this project. I bought several cans of paint I didn't use, and still total cost of the materials was under $40, not including the apples.

While looking at the finished product my youngest son told me, "I wouldn't have believed you painted that if I didn't see it."

I feel the same way myself.

Go ahead, make our day.

Give us your best shot, we can take it! Our line of range traps can handle up to full-auto .50 cal BMG, so we're pretty confident. We have the safest ranges in the industry as well, with low angled ramps (12° for rifle and 15° for pistol) to direct bullets into a circular Deceleration Chamber which slows them until they drop into a collection container. There, a biodegradable aqueous solution encapsulates the lead particles before they become airborne and inhaled by range users. The result...a safer, cleaner environment for the shooter! Advanced range design is just one reason we remain the #1 choice for military, police, gun manufacturers, and public shooting ranges in the world.

Matthews determined he had to have an AR-15 pistol chambered in .22 Long Rifle—or two—and set out to build a pair on a budget.

WRING BIG FUN

FROM A SMALL-BUDGET SMALLBORE PART 1

HERE'S HOW TO BUILD A PAIR OF COST-EFFECTIVE .22-CAL. AR-15 PISTOLS

Matthews tackles two budget-minded, home-brewed semi-auto pistols. In this first installment he sources some parts.

By Steven Matthews

As a writer for a national magazine I have a responsibility to write about subjects that reflect the interest of readers. For the last several years the most popular firearm has been the AR-15 family of weapons. Never in the recent history of the firearms hobby has there been a gun that so dominated the industry. Today, for better or worse, the gun world seems to revolve around the AR-15. It seems like readers can't get enough AR-15 articles. I have written over 125 SGN articles over the last 10 years and 27 of them have been on AR-15 type firearms. It seems like I have covered the building of about every type of AR-15 that personally interests me. Until recently I figured I would not be writing any more AR-15 related articles (although there are several more in the publishing schedule awaiting publication). Recently while viewing a Web page about fellow AR enthusiast projects, I saw something that interested me. These projects were AR-15 pistols in .22 Long Rifle rimfire. The projects presented on that Web page ran the gamut from mild to wild and expensive to incredibly cheap. I decided I would need a .22 AR pistol of my own. I also decided to turn my personal project into yet another SGN AR-15 article.

The question would be on what type of pistol to build and feature in my article. Over the years I have followed—to some extent—what readers say about my projects. There seem to be two opposing viewpoints about my projects. Some say my projects are too hard while others say they are too easy. Some also say my projects are too expensive while others question “why is this guy so cheap?” This got me to thinking that perhaps on this article I could try to please both factions at the same time. This means that for this project I would be building two AR pistols. One will be very easy to build but all of the factory-made parts will drive the cost of the project higher. The other project will be very inexpensive yet the cost savings will be paid by way of extra labor fabricating inexpensive parts. Readers who decide to take on this project can combine the two projects to make their own as easy or hard as they want and they can decide just how much work they are willing to do to save money.

Matthews' pair of AR-15 smallbore pistols are a reflection of his tastes. As with full-size AR-15s, the end product can be molded however the builder wants.

While one project will be more expensive than the other, that doesn't mean that I will be frivolous in my spending. My cheap nature will not allow it. I will still be searching out the best prices for the expensive project as well as the less expensive project.

Since both projects will be .22 Long Rifle versions of the AR-15, there will be one part common to both projects: .22 Long Rifle conversion units. These conversion units replace the standard bolt carrier assembly in an AR-15 and allow easy conversion to .22 Long Rifle. These conversion units allow you to create a real AR-15 in .22 Long Rifle rather than just making a gun that externally looks like an AR-15. All you have to do is install the conversion and a .22 Long Rifle magazine and you are ready to go. On the other hand, if you are starting from scratch, a better method is to make your AR a dedicated .22 AR-15. A dedicated .22 Long Rifle AR-15 features a barrel made specifically for .22 rimfire and does away with the ability to change back to .223/5.56 NATO. You can still use the lower half of the gun for either caliber but the upper will be for the specific caliber. A dedicated .22 Long Rifle AR-15 is typically more accurate and functions somewhat better than a converted gun. The projects featured here will be dedicated guns. The .22 Long Rifle conversion units for each type are slightly different. A conversion unit that fits in a .223/5.56 gun features a chamber adapter that fits into the chamber to fill in the larger chamber. A conversion unit for a dedicated .22 Long Rifle gun does not have this adapter. This type of conversion simply features a collar that fits on to the end of a dedicated .22 Long Rifle barrel.

There are several brands and formats of AR-15 .22 conversion units on the market. One of the most popular and highly regarded conversions is made by CMMG (www.cmmginc.com). Full retail price direct from CMMG for a conversion with one magazine can be as high as $259. Because I search out all the bargains I can find, I have never paid full retail for CMMG conversions I have bought in the past. The most I have ever paid was about $150. Fortunately, for these two projects, I got by for even less.

I attend the Knob Creek Military Gun Show and Machine Gun Shoot (www.machinegunshoot.com) twice each year. At this very large show many of the big names in AR-15 parts attend and sell their products. SGN advertisers such as J+T Distributing, M+A Parts, Model 1 Sales, SARCO, DS Arms, and others offer their wares at prices at or below the prices advertised in SGN. This is also the place where these companies sell limited quantity items, production overruns, customer returns, cosmetic defect parts and other items that normally are not listed in their catalogs. This means you can find some real bargains at this large show.

One of the big-name AR companies that routinely set up at the "Creek" is CMMG. Since I needed a couple of their .22 conversion units, I searched them out to see if they had any bargain-priced conversions. Despite their catalog prices, I found a bargain on .22 conversions. These discounted units were used conversions that had been used for product and quality control testing. While used, they were in very good condition other than being a little dirty from use. They were being sold without packaging and had one used magazine attached to the used units. As used units, they were being sold "as is" but due to the high quality of CMMG products I had no concerns. The price was only $80 each! This was about a third the cost of a new unit so I jumped on the deal. They had types for dedicated .22 projects as well as units with the chamber adapters. I prefer stainless conversions but they only had one left so I bought one stainless and one Parkerized version.

After buying the used conversions, I decided to look over the rest of the CMMG display. I got lucky and found another big bargain. They were offering a large pile of non-standard AR-15 barrels. Some were cosmetic defects, quality control rejects, or incompletely machined barrels. It was there that I found a dedicated 11-inch .22 Long Rifle barrel that would be perfect for my high priced/easy build pistol. This barrel was a discontinued version that Matthews chose the ATI (American Tactical Imports) Omni Hybrid polymer lower receiver. This stylized receiver features molded-in-place metal inserts to strengthen the receiver.

For the easy build project, Matthews decided to use the ATI Omni Hybrid Upper receiver. This receiver is also made of polymer with metal inserts to strengthen it.

ATI's Omni Hybrid upper and lower receivers mesh well, and make a striking package. Matthews thinks polymer receivers will be the future of the AR-15.

featured a different profile than what CMMG now sells. It was completely finished and looked to be a good barrel despite its $80 price, which was about $100 under normal price.

While these parts would be used on the higher priced pistol, there is no reason to spend more than necessary. Between these two parts, I saved more than $250. This would leave more money for other items and help keep the high-dollar project from being prohibitively expensive. If you spend like a drunken sailor, the project can become ridiculously expensive. Bargains are out there for everyone; you just have to search them out and jump on them when you find them.

I would still need another .22 barrel for the two projects. For the low-cost pistol, I wanted a barrel even lower in cost than the bargain-priced CMMG unit. In this case, I would be using an incredibly low-cost option that I have used on past .22 Long Rifle AR-15 rifle projects: a lightly used Ruger 10/22 barrel. Replacing stock Ruger 10/22 barrels with target barrels is a very popular project, so there are a lot of 10/22 "take off" barrels for sale cheap. I routinely see 10/22 take off barrels priced from as low as $15, so I searched one out at some local gun shows.

I only had to visit a couple shows before I found a used barrel for my project. One big benefit to using a 10/22 barrel is that they are already chambered in .22 Long Rifle. While you could utilize any inexpensive barrel blank for this project, a chambered 10/22 barrel makes the barrel portion much easier.

A Ruger 10/22 barrel will in no way fit an AR-15 receiver, but it will be excellent material to use to make an AR-15 .22 Long Rifle barrel. Anyone who has a metal lathe and some basic lathe operation skills will be able to easily turn a 10/22 barrel into an AR-15 .22 Long Rifle barrel. At this point, I am sure some readers are saying they can't build this project because they don't have a lathe or the skill to run it.

Well, do you think I was born atop a lathe with the skill pre-loaded in my brain? Anyone with basic mechanical skills can learn to operate a lathe. I bought an old lathe at a garage sale back in the 1970s for $50 and picked up a lathe book and taught myself. You can, too. Used lathes today may cost as much as $350–$500, but this cost can quickly be recouped in savings on just a few projects.

In this case, making an AR barrel from a 10/22 barrel will save about $200. A few cost-saving jobs like this will pay for a used lathe. Making my own guns has allowed this poor SOB to have a gun collection way beyond my economic status.

With the barrels and conversion units purchased, I would now need two AR-15 lower receivers. The lower receiver is what the government considers to be "the gun" and therefore needs to be purchased from a FFL-holding gun dealer. You will have to make out a form 4473 and have a background check run to buy this part, even though most would not consider it to be a gun.

Before I go on to describe what receivers I chose for this project, I need to address some of the legal aspects of using AR-15 receivers for pistol projects. You cannot legally use an AR-15 rifle receiver to build a pistol. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (BATFE) has very specific rules on what defines an AR-15 rifle or pistol receiver and how they can be used.

Failure to obey these BATFE regulations can result in one committing a federal felony that is punishable by 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Under BATFE regulations one cannot use a rifle receiver to create a legal pistol. Using an existing rifle receiver to build a pistol creates what the BATFE calls a short-barreled rifle. Creating a short-barreled rifle (SBR) without prior BATFE approval is illegal and subject to the same penalties as creating an illegal machine gun.

There are legal means to create SBRs, but that is beyond the scope of this article. An AR-15 rifle receiver is generally defined as any AR-15 type receiver that has at any time (first time assembled) been assembled into a rifle format firearm. This means you cannot use an existing rifle receiver to make a pistol. To be legal you must use an AR-15 pistol receiver or a "virgin" AR-15 receiver that has never been assembled as a rifle.

Note that there is somewhat of a "gray area" concerning "virgin" or new AR-15 pistol receivers. A stripped receiver cannot technically be classified as a pistol or rifle until it is assembled into one format or the other. Some AR parts sellers offer bare AR-15 pistol receivers for sale, but if it has never been assembled as a pistol it technically can't be a pistol. A virgin receiver is just that, a virgin

Recently the firearms accessory company TAPCO has begun offering their brand of receiver along with their extensive line of other AR-15 parts and accessories.

TAPCO contracted with one of the largest makers of AR-15 receivers to make their private-label units. This GI-spec receiver is just as good as many other brands.

The Kinect™ by KDG for MLOK™ is a revolutionary QD mounting system that will change the way we attach accessories to our modular weapons platforms.

Much like the Sidelok™ for Picatinny attachment, Kinect™ insures proper and easy installation, eliminating common variables that would cause issues. (ie: over tightening) Although revolutionary, Kinect™ is quite simple in its operation.

There are two spring-loaded wedges in the base of the Kinect™ mounting point. When you press the accessory or rail section down in the MLOK™ slot, two tiny deployment triggers get pressed against the rail firing the wedges into place.

There is nothing more frustrating than fiddling with an allen wrench (if you can find it) to get your accessories on or off your weapon with traditional modular rail sections.

This changes the whole dynamic of the MLOK™ system and really makes every accessory truly removable with the ability to mount it in a second when needed.

receiver. It is not a rifle or pistol until it is assembled into one form or the other. When you buy a stripped receiver, it is listed as “other” or “receiver” on the form 4473 since as a bare receiver it is not a pistol or rifle yet.

The most common and easiest way of getting an AR-15 pistol receiver is simply to buy a stripped virgin receiver from a FFL-holding gun dealer. Once you assemble it into either format, said format will be its designation for life. If you buy a stripped receiver and build it first as a rifle, it should always remain a rifle. If you first build it as a pistol, it should always remain a pistol. This way you don't have to worry about legal technicalities.

Just remember the saying: “Once a pistol, always a pistol,” and “Once a rifle, always a rifle.” This will keep you out of trouble. I specifically do not recommend buying a used AR-15 pistol receiver, since you cannot really be sure of its past classification.

If a trace on the gun by law enforcement shows that the receiver was originally sold as a rifle and you used it to build a pistol, you would be in possession of an illegal SBR.

For my two projects, I purchased two stripped virgin receivers through my local FFL-holding gun dealer. Most gun dealers don't carry stripped receivers so you may have to special-order them. At the present time (summer 2015) AR-15 parts are at record low prices, so the receivers will not be a major expense as long as you are a frugal shopper.

For my higher-priced project, I wanted a unique receiver that was styled significantly different than a GI part. I chose the ATI (American Tactical Imports) Omni Hybrid polymer lower receiver. It's stylized and features molded-in-place metal inserts for strength. A lot of AR builders criticize and dislike polymer receivers, and some of their criticisms are valid. Cracking at the rear of the receiver is a well-known issue. The designers at ATI addressed this issue by molding in metal reinforcements. This gives the ATI Omni Hybrid receiver enough strength that I have no concerns about using one for my projects.

An AR-15 receiver is not a highly stressed part, and if it's designed correctly, there is no reason a polymer receiver can't be adequate. Low manufacturing cost makes this receiver very inexpensive. A while back, I ordered three of them from an online source, and only paid $37 each, which included shipping cost.

I am not a big fan of polymer gun parts, but they're the wave of the future, so I have made up my mind to accept them as long as they perform adequately. I think 10 years from now, most AR-15s will feature polymer receivers, just as most of today's handguns use them. My low-cost/high-labor project would feature another brand of inexpensive lower receiver. Recently the firearms accessory company TAPCO has begun offering their own brand of receiver along with their line of other AR-15 parts. The TAPCO AR-15 receiver is a traditional forged aluminum GI-type receiver.

They are advertised as GI-spec, and I recently purchased three of them from Cope's Distributing for only $34.95 each. Some AR enthusiast will immediately dismiss a TAPCO receiver as some low-cost/low-quality receiver since TAPCO products tend to be very low-cost. This receiver is not actually made by TAPCO, which contracted with one of the largest makers of AR-15 receivers to make their private-label units. This GI-spec receiver is just as good as many other brands. The only difference is the name on the side of the receiver. Later I will look deeper at the TAPCO receiver.

A Ruger 10/22 barrel (on bottom) will not, in any way, fit with an AR-15 receiver but when massaged properly it can be used as an AR-15 .22 Long Rifle barrel. Matthews found a dedicated 11-inch .22 Long Rifle barrel (top) that would be perfect for the high priced/easy build pistol.

With the lowers for both projects sourced at bargain prices, it was time to obtain a couple upper receivers. For my low-cost/high-labor project I went extremely cheap. DSA is primarily known as a maker of high quality FALs, but a few years ago they got into making AR-15s. DSA purchases their 7075 aluminum upper receiver forgings from outside sources but machines them in-house. In the course of machining hundreds of receivers per day, they generate a few quality control rejects. These may have dimensional issues or cosmetic defects that keep them from being sold as first-run product.

Rather than throwing them away, they toss them into a big tub and then sell them at shows like Knob Creek. They are offered as “you fix them” specials, and the price is very low, usually $15 each or two for $25.

While many are too bad to be fixed, you can root through the pile and find a few that can be easily repaired. I can spend a little time correcting problems to save a lot of money. I normally buy a couple every show. For readers who can't utilize this low-cost option, all is not lost. Many AR-15 parts vendors such as JSE Surplus, Cope's Distributing, Palmetto State Armory and others routinely offer cosmetic defect receivers for sale at very low prices.

I have bought a lot of cosmetic defect upper receivers over the last several years for $30-$40 each. The bargains are out there; you just have to look for them. Most of the cosmetic defect receivers (both uppers and lowers) have such small defects that you have to look really hard just to see the minor imperfections.

For my easy build project I wanted a first-rate ready-to-go receiver. Because I was using the stylized ATI Omni Hybrid polymer lower receiver, I decided to use the ATI Omni Hybrid upper. It's styled to match the Omni Hybrid lower receiver. It's also made of polymer, with metal inserts to strengthen it. This receiver is priced at $40 and can be ordered direct from ATI through their web site (www.americantactical.us).

The threads on the front are in the form of a metal insert that is molded in place. While the threads should be able to accept the same amount of torque as a metal receiver, keep in mind that the insert is embedded in polymer. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link, and I recommend using less torque on this receiver than an all-metal receiver. ©

Next time (10/20 issue): Beginning the easy-build .22 pistol.

Matthews found a great bargain on .22 AR conversions. These discounted CMMG units were used conversions that had been used for product and quality control testing.

ZENITH FIREARMS' TURKISH DELIGHTS

Want an H&K-quality pistol without the price tag? Look no further.

By Jim Grant

Roller-delayed guns are like caviar: they're an acquired taste. They're something most shooters don't know they want until they have a chance to shoot one. This is especially true for people who grew up seeing Navy SEALs or SAS troops wielding 9mm MP5s. Once the seed of desire is planted, an unrelenting desire to own a scary, HK-pattern roller-locked carbine or pistol tends to grow out of control regardless of finances. For shooters already heavily invested in the AR-15, it can be challenging to justify buying another platform with its own proprietary magazines and accessories. Unlike most acquired tastes, foresight isn't lost in its pursuit, even if it is the last issue considered.

The desire is further fueled by the ultra-smooth cycling roller-action and decidedly utilitarian appearance. Unfortunately, these weapons tend to be prohibitively expensive with equally pricey accessories. Thankfully, more companies have begun to import or build their own H&K-inspired carbines and pistols, bringing down the price of both. Some recent prime examples are the new ZP and Z series of pistols from Zenith firearms of Turkey, now being distributed by Atlantic Firearms.

Like many modern firearm designs, the roots of these Turkish delights lie in the ashes of World War II. German small arms engineers were desperately looking for a way to better arm their rapidly diminishing infantry, despite scarce resources. This was true as the once-massive Nazi empire, encircled by countries it once sought to possess, was forced to operate as an economic island nation; its resources dwindling as it faced a multi-front, fiscally-strangling invasion.

Based on the overwhelmingly positive reports of the MP 44/StG 44's combat effectiveness, German military minds sought for a way to inexpensively arm as many of their soldiers with this early assault rifle. Combat-experienced troops were becoming ever more sparse as the war dragged on and casualties mounted. With lessons learned during the development and modernization of both their iconic MP 40 submachine gun and infamous MG42, engineers began work on the STG 45(M), or Sturmgewehr of 1945.

A prototype developed by Mauser, the StG 45(M) in 7.92x33mm Kurz caliber was the first assault rifle to solely employ roller-delayed blowback as an operating principle. The vast majority of the rifle is constructed from metal stampings with the exception of the wooden stock. This gives the carbine a very utilitarian/industrial appearance; a trend that would continue with Heckler and Koch products until the introduction of polymer models like the G36 and UMP. Despite reducing production costs by nearly half, these improvements were too little, too late. The newer StG 45(M) was never produced in large enough numbers to affect the war's outcome.

Interestingly enough, the first prototype of the StG 45(M), the MKb Gerät 06, used roller-delayed blowback

The manufacturer recognizes that iron sights are tough to use with this sort of pistol, and thoughtfully provides an accessory rail for easy scope mounting.

A swivel at the rear of the receiver makes it easy to suspend the Z-5P from a single-point sling. Belt carry's not much of an option with this sort of pistol.

The unitary polymer grip is typical of later MP5 designs, and has been well proven in combat use by military and police forces over multiple decades.

The Z-5P muzzle is threaded for easy installation of muzzle devices, while the shorter Z-5K version sports a muzzle cut off even with the end of the handguard.

A red dot sight like this Micro-Max B-Dot from Hi-Lux Optics is ideal for SMG-based pistols like the Z-5P. It's much easier than trying to aim with the iron sights.

combined with a conventional gas-operated piston rod. After some testing, it was determined that the operating rod was redundant and was subsequently eliminated in the next iteration, the imaginatively named Gerät 06H. Where the added "H" suffix abbreviates the German word for half-locked.

After Germany's defeat, a section of the Mauser Werke Weapon R&D program that had been developing this design, was transferred to the French Direction des Etudes et Fabrication d'Armement (DEFA) group. Later, this group became known as the Centre d'Etudes et d'Armement de Mulhouse (CEAM) when it changed locations. It was here around late 1947 that promising young engineer Ludwig Vorgrimler began his life's work that would eventually lead to the development of G3 series of rifles. Though not before leaving France to join Spain's Centro de Estudios Técnicos de Materiales Especiales (Center for Technical Studies of Special Materials) or CETME program.

While there, Vorgrimler continued development of a shoulder-fired, roller-delayed automatic rifle. His prototypes ranged in caliber and construction but ultimately at the suggestion of H&K, he finalized the design in 7.62x51mm.

Incredibly, it continues to serve with distinction, though now as a designated marksman's rifle rather than the German infantryman's standard issue rifle. Equally impressive is the number of derivative designs that sprung from this original rifle, such as the famous MP5 sub machinegun.

The Maschinenpistole 5, or MP5 is a roller-delayed select-fire submachine gun manufactured and designed by Heckler and Koch based on the G3 rifle. Feeding from detachable box magazines, the 9mm MP5 sub machinegun set the gold standard for subgun accuracy and controllability when it was introduced in the mid-1960s.

Original models feature wooden stocks and handguards as well as a polymer lower receiver with a pistol grip. It has a cyclic rate ranging from 700 to 900 rounds per minute, depending on caliber and model type. Transferable select-fire models are increasingly rare in the United States due to NFA restrictions and fetch well over $25,000. Shooters lacking that sort of disposable income looking to scratch their subgun itch have had limited options until recently.

This is due to the limited number of manufacturers who deal with MP5s, the high cost of genuine HK components and the fact that Heckler and Koch ceased importation of semi-automatic MP5 pistols and carbines after 1989. Additionally, true HK MP5 carbines like the HK94 are prized items, normally garnering around $3,500 when shooters can find them. This is why the importation of Zenith-made roller-delayed pistols from Atlantic Firearms is such a big deal.

Zenith produces a wide array of HK-pattern, roller-delayed variants. Currently, only four are available for import into the United States: the Z-5K, Z-5P Z-5RS and Z-43P.

The Z-5 series are functionally identical. These models differ in small but important ways. The Z-5P and Z-5K models are based on the compact 'Kurz' MP5 submachine gun/PDW though only operate semi-automatically.

Like the MP5K they emulate, both Kurz-inspired pistols wear an abbreviated 3.25-inch polymer handguard that features a small handstop to prevent shooters from injuring their support hand while firing. The difference between the two models concerns their barrel lengths and muzzles. The Z-5P features a 5.8-inch barrel topped with standard 1/2x28mm threads and MP5-standard three-lug interface. Shooters who don't want to be locked in to MP5-specific muzzle devices or want to use adapters have many more options. Traditionalists can still use historically accurate three-lug flash hiders, brakes or suppressors.

The Z-5K model doesn't feature any sort of threading and the barrel abruptly ends above the short polymer handguard. This is a slightly lighter, more compact pistol than the Z-5P with more than an inch of barrel removed. The resulting handgun is just over a foot long with a 4.6-inch barrel and tips the scales at 4.43 pounds. Not compact and light compared to traditional handguns, but certainly more manageable than full-sized MP5 pistols like the Z-5RS.

The last model, the Z-43, is a different beast entirely. Unlike the MP5-type 9mm handguns, the Z-43 P is chambered in NATO-standard 5.56mm. It features a 12-inch barrel, and is based on the HK33 carbine, although it requires more than just American-made parts for shooters to legally add a stock. If the Z-43 P were converted to a carbine, it would need both enough American-made parts to meet 922r compliance and a tax stamp as its barrel is less than 16 inches long.

The 12-inch-barreled Z-43 is based on the HK33 carbine, and it can use either surplus steel magazines or the synthetic units supplied with the pistol.

The Z-43 uses a rifle-style rear sight, which is fine on a rifle, but hard to use when a pistol is held far from the eye. The notch is the most useful aperture.

The Z-43 muzzle is threaded for a muzzle device, making it easy to mount a suppressor if you have one. While bigger than the Z-5P, it's still relatively compact.

Buyers looking to convert the pistol without venturing into NFA territory could instead have a gunsmith permanently attach a four-inch barrel extension, bringing the total barrel length to 16.08 inches. However, they would still be subject to 922r compliance.

The Z-43 P has some interesting features including the slimline handguard and oversized charging handle. The latter is a necessity given that charging the rifle requires a certain degree of effort. Chalk it up to the brand new, not-broke-in-yet action. Unlike the pistols mentioned above, the Z-43 P doesn't ship with a thread protector or an unthreaded barrel. Rather, it includes a compensator that appears to be a variation of the 5.56mm flash hider seen on military HK rifles. Additionally, all of these roller-delayed designs don't lock open on the last round.

All Zenith pistols include a smorgasbord of desirable features and accessories straight from the factory. This is a welcome change from the Spartan offerings of years past. For example, few HK-pattern rifles include any method of mounting optics from the factory. The majority that do have a rail welded to the receiver. This is a more secure method of attaching a scope rail than claw mounts, but it's also a permanent one.

The problem with HK optic rails is that they cost so dang much. Most range from $80 for sub-par quality mounts to around $300 for premium ones. Turkish manufacturer Zenith actually includes a railed mount with their pistols. Other niceties that ship with their guns include three factory magazines, a nylon sling, cleaning kit and a fitted hard case that holds everything.

This might seem like a strange thing to concentrate on, but it addresses one of the major shortcomings of the platform—cost of ownership. American shooters are thoroughly spoiled by AR-15 carbines. Most come with an integrated optics rail, and high-quality parts are inexpensive and plentiful.

One of the greatest downsides to running certain HK-style rifles, pistols and carbines is the prohibitive cost of magazines. This isn't because HK overcharges for them or because they're made of some rare, indestructible material, but rather due to their sparse nature. Note that the G3 system doesn't suffer from this at all. Magazines are cheap and plentiful for that platform due to the ubiquitous nature of the rifle and the fact it was phased out by a different carbine that isn't backwards compatible with magazines or accessories—leading to a surplus of both.

Why mention this? Because Zenith pistols come with affordable new-production magazines, furniture and accessories. Yes, other quality makers like HKParts.net exist, but these Turkish parts offer a cheaper alternative to cash-strapped shooters who likely won't subject their firearms to nightmarish conditions.

Pistols like the Z-43 P benefit the most from these fresh imports. This is because vastly fewer countries adopted the carbine compared to its G3 progenitor. This means that fewer accessories are available, which drives up their price. For example, used steel HK 30-round [Cont. to page 70]

Americans love customizing their stuff. Giant chrome wheels, obnoxious window decals and garden gnomes are all testament to the human desire to make something our own and firearms are certainly no exception. With popular designs like the AK or AR-15, the only limiting factor is a shooter's budget. With less prolific firearms like the HK93/33 series, a little more digging is required.

For years, there were precious few affordable aftermarket parts for roller-delayed rifles. In particular, railed handguards were nigh impossible to locate without knowing a source. HKParts.net, a company known for its quality imports has entered the fray with their new series of roller-delayed handguards—the HKParts Low Profile Aluminum Handguards.

These new offerings match the slim profile of modern HK handguards and are built from aircraft aluminum and steel hardware. They're available in dozens of different sizes to fit everything from the MP5K to the PSG-1. Additionally, shooters can choose between two configurations: M-Lok and KeyMod, both go a long way to keep a host firearm slim, light and modular.

The aluminum shell attaches to a steel anchor with two hex screws that secure the entire assembly to the front sight group like a normal handguard. Instead of using a locking retention pin, the M-Lok handguard uses a threaded oversized hex screw that secures to the other side of the handguard anchor. This provides a much more secure method of mounting accessories like laser sights whose zero can shift when attached to polymer handguards.

The Low Profile Aluminum Handguards that are offered by HKParts.net can be had for KeyMod accessories or, like this one, for M-Lok compatible accessories.

Additionally, whether a shooter chooses the M-Lok or KeyMod version, they're not totally restricted to accessories that use them. Many companies offer rail segments that feature these interfaces, though to minimize added weight, shooters should try to use proper accessories without an adapter—though either will function fine.

One unexpected benefit from the design's porous nature is that it allows a great volume of air to freely circulate around the barrel and cocking tube. This allows the barrel to rapidly dissipate heat, though thanks to the handguard's limited [Cont. to page 70] magazines are nearly $80 each, while G3 mags are rarely priced above $10.

Had Germany not decided to adopt the HK G36 assault rifle and instead gone with a 5.56mm HK G93 select-fire carbine, the number of available surplus parts would likely be greater. As things stand, this recent batch of imports is a Godsend to owners of 5.56mm HK-style pistols and carbines. Which has the added effect of freeing up used pre-ban magazines for shooters living in states with restrictive firearms laws. Three 40-round magazines purchased by the author had dates in the mid 1970s stamped on them.

Thankfully, magazine scarcity isn't an issue with 9x19mm Parabellum models. Many police departments, counter-terrorism units and private security groups around the world have adopted the rugged MP5, so there are multiple sources of used and surplus magazines and accessories available. They'll never reach the incredibly cheap costs of surplus AKM mags and parts, but they're still affordable to most shooters.

The only accessories that are still somewhat expensive are buttstocks. Although even in that case, it greatly depends on the type. Fixed stocks are very affordable for .308 G3 rifles and are relatively inexpensive for MP5 carbines. Collapsible stocks are considerably more expensive, though definitely add to the HK 'cool-factor' and are surprisingly useful as they are handy.

All imported Zenith firearms include iconic HK features like the drum sights. Shooters use these sights in much the same way they would peep sights found on AR-15 or like post and notch sights found on AKM rifles. Both HK-pattern rifles and AR-15s use protected front sight posts and rear apertures. The Zenith pistols adhere to MP5-style hooded front sight posts and the rotating rear sight drum.

On the Z-series pistols, this drum features three holes and one notch all located 9° apart from the drum's axis. The holes are labeled and calibrated for various distances ranging from 200 to 400 meters, while the notch is a point blank setting for anything inside of 100 meters. On the compact or Kurz models, the drum simply features four notches. Each one is calibrated to a different distance. To select a range, a shooter simply rotates the drum to one of the four settings.

For the review, HKParts.net supplied an M-Lok rail for HK93-pattern rifles/pistols and the rail was installed and tested on both a Zenith Z-43 P pistol. In both cases the rail proved durable and easy to install. It also greatly increased both firearm's modularity, with its 15 separate M-Lok attachment points.

Weighing in at a fraction over eight ounces, the Low Profile Rail adds very little weight to the host firearm. This is incredible given that standard polymer handguards with heat shields are only an ounce and a half lighter. Furthermore, these new handguards are around half the price of competing designs and thankfully for shooters concerned with 922r are completely made in America.

One note of caution for shooters looking to install this handguard on pistols: Due to NFA restrictions, shooters must avoid installing a foregrip on these handguns, otherwise the firearm can be considered an illegal AOW by the ATF. However, tactical lights, lasers and bipods are all legal.

This rail makes an excellent addition to a rifle that out of the box most people struggle to customize. Whether a shooter is looking to add a bipod or simply an angled foregrip and taclight, the HKParts.net M-Lok Low Profile aluminum hanguard gets the job done with confidence-inspiring durability. ©

Another noteworthy design feature is the magazine release. There are two major varieties of magazine release configurations available. One with a standalone push-button magazine release, and one with a combination push-button, paddle release. Zenith pistols include the later of which is a tremendously desirable feature that is prohibitively expensive to have added to rifles or pistols that lack it.

The reason the paddle is so desirable is that it allows for easier reloads by permitting a shooter to simply engage the paddle by grabbing the inserted magazine nearest to the well. This is particularly useful for small-handed shooters as the button release is often beyond their reach. Also, the paddle is useful for tactical situations where shooters wish to reload their firearm while retaining the depleted magazine.

Other ergonomic features include a rotating fire selector that is easily accessible to the shooting hand's thumb without shifting one's grip, as well as the iconic forward charging handle. The selector is marked with a white '0' for safe and a red '1' for semiautomatic fire. A blank square beneath the '1' betrays the Z series' subgun heritage.

The charging handle folds forward with momentum, which prevents it from snagging on environmental obstructions. This charger does not reciprocate with the bolt so thumb-over-bore shooters can use their preferred shooting style without concern of injuring their fragile digits.

These same shooters will greatly appreciate the slim forearms that come on the Z-43 P and Z-5RS. The two models tested, the Z-43 P and Z-5P, proved remarkably accurate and thoroughly enjoyable, if unconventional to shoot.

While Zenith adheres to HK standards with zealous tenacity in most regards, in one they departed from their German inspiration. German-made military 5.56mm HK33/93 magazines are constructed of either steel or aluminum. Zenith departs from this standard and instead takes inspiration from Germany's current infantry rifle, the G36.

Like the G36, the Zenith Z-43 P does away with metal magazines entirely in favor of high-strength translucent polymer magazines. The three included examples with the Z-43 are built from an amber-colored material and include interlocking nubs for shooters who want to couple magazines together to form so-called "jungle mags."

Additionally, these polymer magazines feature extruded markings for 15 and 25 rounds on the left side and 20 and 30 rounds on the right. They also have a strange cartouche centered in a line dissecting the magazine depicting a crossed out hexagon and an airplane in flight. The excellently illustrated manual makes no mention of these, but they presumably serve as a visual guide to determine if the follower is functioning as intended or incorrectly canted.

Magazine hieroglyphics aside, the Z-43 P pistol functioned without issue while running a combination of inexpensive plinking ammo and high-end target rounds. Ejection was predictably violent and positive, while recoil was negligible, even absent a buttstock. The 12-inch barrel produced a louder report than 16-inch barreled carbines of the same design, but was still pleasant to fire with appropriate hearing protection.

The Z-5P was evaluated both with and without a sound suppressor and in both cases functioned 100 percent with the four types of ammunition tested. It made a quieter suppressor host than traditional handguns, presumably because it increased the distance from the muzzle to the shooter's ears.

The three 9mm magazines included with the Z-5P were all but indistinguishable from true HK mags, and in testing functioned 100%. Magazine lockup on the 9mm Z-5P was excellent and very positive with all 30-round mags and encountered little to no perceivable wobble.

The short cocking handle is easier to manipulate than was anticipated, though difficult to effectively charge if the pistol is equipped with a large optic. Micro red dots had the least impact on ergonomics, while aiding accuracy. Alternatively, the fastest-shooting optic was an EOTech 552 holosight due to its oversized reticle, though it made charging the firearm awkward due to its size and proximity to the charging handle.

On the larger 5.56mm caliber Z-43 P pistol, the EOTech was the clear winner since the pistol had more rail space to accommodate it. The only downside with the Z-43 was the difficulty most testers encountered while attempting to charge it. Though this seemed to lessen as shooters became more familiar with the pistol and as the action smoothed out with use.

On both pistols the fit and finish appeared top-notch, with a semi-glossy black finish and matte black polymer furniture. All welds on the pistols were clean and seemed on par with genuine HK quality. This is a fact that 99 percent of shooters either won't notice or care about but it's an important detail as it often reflects on the entire build quality.

Another shared feature are the sling loops. The Z-5P uses a pivoting sling loop attached to the polymer SP89-style end cap, which greatly aids in shooter accuracy when paired with the included single-point sling. The Z-43 P utilizes a steel end cap with a fixed sling loop on the left side. This doesn't assist the shooter in stabilizing the pistol, but it does make carrying the hefty eight-pound handgun much easier.

Either one of these specimens would make a fine addition to any shooter's collection if they're looking for HK quality roller-delayed pistol without the price tag. ©

THIS DIANA GAS-SPRING IS A SOLID PERFORMER!

By Tom Gaylord

Today we're looking at Diana's latest spring-piston air rifle, the 340 N-TEC Classic in .177 caliber. It represents Diana's first offering with a gas spring instead of a conventional coiled-steel mainspring.

I'm very cautious about any spring rifle with a gas spring, because dozens of past tests have made me skeptical over the years. The claims for smooth shooting almost never pan out. The claims for accuracy are often inflated. The extra-hard cocking effort is often played down in the advertising, if it's even mentioned at all, yet I find it to be a major influence in how easy it is to operate the gun.

I've seen fewer than 10 air rifles with gas springs that I could recommend to people. As I look at this one, I'll be looking from the vantage point of a lot of past experience.

What is the 340 N-TEC Classic?

This rifle is built around the Diana Model 34, a breakbarrel spring-piston air rifle with a lot of history. I remember that airgun in its early days—the 1980s, when you could buy one deeply discounted for $90. It wasn't much better than one of today's wannabe Chinese breakbarrels. Then, in the early part of this century, Diana embarked on a program of model upgrades throughout their line and they transformed this entry-level springer into the market's best value for the money, in my opinion. And that's the rifle the 340 N-TEC Classic is based on. From the start, this rifle has good genes.

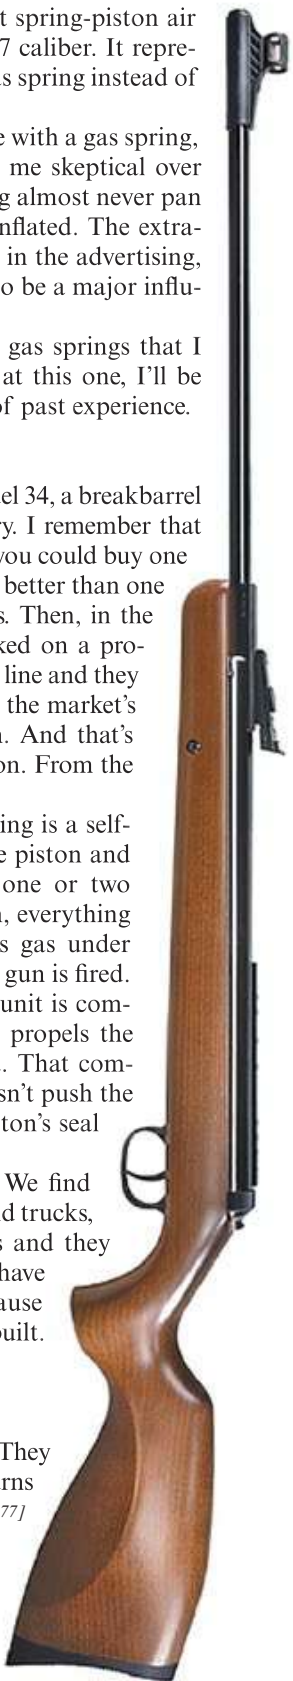

But it also has a gas spring! A gas spring is a self-contained unit that functions both as the piston and the mainspring. It may be made into one or two pieces, but regardless of the construction, everything operates as one unit. The unit contains gas under pressure that powers the piston when the gun is fired. As the gun is cocked, the gas inside the unit is compressed to an even higher pressure that propels the piston forward when the sear releases it. That compressed gas never leaves the gun and doesn't push the pellet. It is the air compressed by the piston's seal that propels the pellet.

Gas springs are not new technology. We find them in various places around our cars and trucks, inside electronic machinery like printers and they are widely used in industry, where they have all but replaced conventional springs because of their longevity and the ability to be rebuilt.

Gas-Spring Advantages and Disadvantages

Gas-spring guns have many advantages. They maintain their power when the weather turns cold. They can be left cocked [Cont. to page 77]

Diana's new 340 N-TEC Classic is a rifle based on the Model 34, but with a revolutionary gas spring.

FIRING RANGE NOT REQUIRED

UMAREX ACTION PISTOLS

With the extensive line of authentic Umarex action pistols, you can train in the convenience of your own backyard* — no need to pack all your gear, jump in your truck, and trek to the gun range. Umarex air pistols have the authentic shape, weight, and feel of their firearm counterparts, but use readily available, low cost ammunition. That means more trigger time, less money, and no hassle.

[Cont. from page 76] for hours without degrading their power. They don't have to vibrate like a coiled steel mainspring does—although some gas spring guns vibrate much more than they should. They're usually lighter than the coiled steel powerplant parts they replace. These can all be important advantages.

They also have some disadvantages. When you cock them, the effort needed to compress the gas inside the unit starts out at the full level the moment the barrel is broken open. A coiled-steel spring usually ramps up its resistance gradually, giving the barrel the chance to move to the point where maximum mechanical advantage is applied.

In sharp contrast to the coiled steel mainspring, the gas spring's effort comes at a point in the barrel where you don't have much mechanical advantage. So, gas-spring guns feel harder to cock than their actual effort implies.

They can also sting and even hurt you when they fire. This is caused by the vibration of poorly fitted parts (namely the piston body) that gets transmitted from the action through the stock, ultimately slapping the shooter in the cheek. It can be very uncomfortable to shoot some gas-spring rifles.

New shooters often ask whether the gas inside the unit will leak out. While leakage is possible, in my experience, it's not a problem with most gas-spring airguns. In more than 100 gas-spring guns I've tested, I've only seen one that leaked. My 2002 Toyota minivan has twin gas springs supporting the rear hatch, and they still work well after 13 years of use—being fully compressed nearly all that time. And the gas springs that are found in airguns are much more durable than the disposable units found in cars and trucks!

The 340 N-TEC stock has a design that allows a thinner wood blank to accomplish more.

The Rifle

If you didn't know the 340 N-TEC was a gas-spring rifle, you would think it is a Diana 34 by appearances. I chose the Classic model to test because it is nearly the same as the wood-stocked 34 with open sights.

The wood and metal finishes are very nice. The wood finish is smooth and even with no patches of wood putty seen anywhere. The metal has a nice polish on all parts, and the bluing (black oxide) is deep. There are some plastic parts—the triggerguard and the front sight ramp—but the trigger blade is metal.

The butt is shaped in the Bavarian style. The raised comb is Bavarian, meaning that it slopes gently downward at the back, instead of being straight and dropping down suddenly like a Monte Carlo comb does. There's a perch-belly shape to the underside of the butt, and a scallop out of the wood on the underside of the butt simulates a cheekpiece.

Sights

The sights are a hooded post with bead in front and an adjustable rear notch. Unfortunately, both sights are fiber optic, which means they lack the precision many shooters are looking for. You can defeat them by lighting your target brightly, which makes the sights fade into a dark outline. The rear sight adjusts with very crisp detents, and there's a scale for windage and numbers for elevation.

The rifle I tested weighs 7 lbs., 12 oz. The listed weight is 8 lbs., 9 oz., but the density of the beech wood can easily affect the rifle's weight by more than a pound.

I like the scope base. Diana has provided 2 deep holes to anchor a scope mount that has a vertical scope stop pin, which is something they didn't have on past models.

Trigger

The trigger is two-stage and adjustable. The manual does not call it a T06 trigger, which is Diana's famous sporting rifle trigger. And in truth it does feel different to me, so I don't believe it is a T06. But, it has a first-stage length adjustment as well as a pull-weight adjustment. The stated weight range is 400 grams to 500 grams. Since I've shot competition air pistol, I know that 500 grams is right at 18 oz. This is a very light trigger!

The trigger pull is very light, but the release isn't predictable. I did adjust it in several ways—length of the first stage pull, then something the manual calls pull-off that I think they are calling stage two. My final adjustment was to boost the trigger pull to the maximum that the manual says is 500 grams or 1 lb. 2 oz. My rifle finally broke at 1 lb. 11 oz. but the stage two release was never as crisp as I wanted.

Ten JSB Exact 10.34-grain pellets went into this 0.492-inch group at 25 yards. This is the best group of the test.

Ten more of the same JSB 10.34-grain pellet went into 0.544-inches at 25 yards. Though this group appears smaller than the first, it's actually larger.

Shooting Impressions

The barrel breaks open very hard. It has a ball-bearing detent whose spring seems to be very strong. This keeps the breech tightly sealed when the rifle fires.

I have to use 2 arms to break the barrel down initially, but the effort seems to lighten as the stroke increases. The barrel comes way past 90 degrees, so Diana is using a long stroke for greater power. The cocking effort is 35 lbs. which isn't that heavy. It's just clumsy at first, because there is so little mechanical advantage.

The firing behavior is not bad. In fact it's pretty smooth. There's no painful slap when the rifle discharges.

The barrel is 19½ inches long, which gives you a good, long lever to cock the rifle. Don't even think of shortening it! Remember what Mr. Jones taught you about the length of levers, back in 8th-grade science class.

Power

This is a .177-caliber spring-piston air rifle, so we expect something in the 14 foot-pound range or more, but not more than 20 foot-pounds. And we get it. In tests the rifle launched pellets out the spout at between 16 and 18 foot-pounds. The lightest pellet tested was an RWS Hobby that was expected to [Cont. to page 79]

DIANA 340 N-TEC CLASSIC

[Cont. from page 78] produce the most energy, and did—generating 18.57 foot-pounds at 1084 fps. What surprised me was the heaviest pellet, a 10.65-grain Beeman Kodiak, developed just one foot-pound less. Usually those heavy pellets do poorly in spring guns, but this one did not, coming in with 17.17 foot-pounds at 852 fps.

THIS RIFLE IS ACCURATE. AND IT IS PLEASANT TO SHOOT...

Accuracy

I found the rifle does need the artillery hold, which means holding it as loosely as possible and allowing it to move as much as it wants to when it fires. I placed the forearm on my flat open palm, with the end of the cocking slot touching the heel of my palm. This isn't the classic artillery hold where the heel of the hand touches the triggerguard, but for some rifles, this is a sweet spot.

Nothing else matters if you can't hit the target! That's why the genetics of this rifle are so important, because Diana's Model 34 is a tackdriver when held correctly. And so is the 340 N-TEC, I'm happy to say. I was delighted to shoot several 25-yard 10-shot groups that hover around the half-inch mark. When you shoot .177-caliber pellets, that means the entire group can be covered by a dime. That's my definition of a tackdriver for an air rifle.

Overall Impression

This rifle is accurate. And it is pleasant to shoot—especially considering the gas spring. It gets a high rating from me. It has a good trigger, a nice firing behavior, it looks great and I like the scope base. Although it's expensive for a breakbarrel spring rifle, I believe the Diana 340 N-TEC is a top value on today's market.

THE KNOX UPDATE

From The Firearms Coalition

By Jeff Knox

NO GUNS FOR SOCIAL SECURITY RECIPIENTS?

The Los Angeles Times reported in July that the Obama administration is pushing a plan to submit the names of up to 4.2 million recipients of Social Security benefits to the FBI's National Instant Check System. People in NICS are not just barred from purchasing firearms, they are "prohibited persons" for whom possession of firearms and ammunition is illegal under the Gun Control Act. It is a felony for them to be in possession or have access to firearms or ammunition under any circumstances, and it is a felony for anyone to knowingly allow a prohibited person access to a firearm or ammunition.

The law regarding "prohibited persons" has become increasingly broad since its adoption in 1968. It was originally intended to restrict violent felons, fugitives, people with dangerous mental disorders, and others who pose a significant threat to public safety, but in fact took away the rights of many non-violent offenders and people who would not be considered dangerous. With the addition of the Lautenberg Amendment in the 1990s, the prohibition was expanded to include anyone convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence. Under this provision, a wife fined $25 for slapping a cheating husband's face is barred from possession of firearms for life.

The law (USC Title 18, Section 922, subsection g.) reads, anyone "who has been adjudicated as a mental defective or who has been committed to a mental institution," is prohibited from possessing firearms or ammunition.

Note the key word "adjudicated." While most reasonable people would interpret that to mean a ruling from a court, the implementing regulations for this law use a much broader definition. The relevant section of the Federal Code of Regulations (27 C.F.R. 478.11) states:

"(1) A determination by a court, board, commission, or other lawful authority that a person, as a result of marked subnormal intelligence, or mental illness, incompetency, condition, or disease:

* Is a danger to himself or to others; or

* Lacks the mental capacity to contract or manage his own affairs."

Many years ago, under Clinton, the Veterans Administration began submitting names to NICS of veterans and dependent beneficiaries who they said met that definition of "mentally defective," including anyone who is not considered able to manage their own VA benefits.

The VA makes this "incompetence" determination not through a court or commission, but through its own bureaucratic process. There is no judge, or even a determination from a physician required, and the VA determination of incompetence is not binding on any other aspect of the person's life. A person rated as "mentally incompetent" under the VA can still enter into contracts, buy and sell real estate, incorporate a business, marry, divorce, or even adopt a child. The only things they can't do, as far as I can tell, are sign VA-related documents or purchase or possess firearms or ammunition.

The Social Security Administration standards for "incompetence" are similar, it is merely a bureaucratic finding that the person's interests are best served by having their benefits processed through what they call a "Representative Payee" rather than going directly to the beneficiary. If the Obama administration gets their way, all of these people will also be prohibited from ever possessing a firearm or ammunition—even under close supervision—for the rest of their lives.

For most people, a determination of incompetence and the assignment of a fiduciary results in additional financial benefits. Both the VA and Social Security can treat this as an additional disability and increase benefit payments accordingly. In the VA system, this can result in benefit payments going up as much as $1000 per month or more. That can be a pretty strong incentive for a person to go along with, or even seek, an incompetency determination. Some people, when they discover that this is going to cost them their right to arms, have tried to fight the system, but saving their rights means giving up the additional financial assistance—and that can be a tough choice.

Nobody wants violent lunatics and suicidal individuals to get their hands on guns, but infringing on the rights of millions of innocent, harmless citizens is by no means a reasonable way for the VA or Social Security to attempt that.

Republicans failed to address this problem when they controlled both Houses of Congress and the White House, but they have had a bill in congress every session for the past five years called the Veterans Second Amendment Protection Act, which would correct VA's dangerous overreach by requiring an actual adjudication that a person is a danger to themselves or others, before firearms rights could be revoked. Now that they once again control Congress, things aren't looking much better. The last time I checked, the bill only had four House cosponsors.

If you are outraged by this situation, your elected representatives need to hear from you. The VA practice needs to be stopped, and it must not be allowed to spread to Social Security or other government programs. You can reach your Senators and Representative through their House.gov and Senate.gov links, or by calling 202-224-3121.

ATTENTION KOREAN WAR VETS M1951/A1 COMBAT SUSPENDERS

The U.S. was unprepared for such a cold winter & hurriedly parachuted in down-filled sleeping bags. But there was no provision on field equipment for carrying the bags, so they were carried under the arm, tied to backpack, or carried open around the neck. As a stop-gap measure, they designed a new set of field suspenders—M1951/A—and they also designed sleeping bag carrying straps to attach to suspenders. We have found some of these that were stored for over 60 years in new condition. New $24.95 ea.

Pair of MP44 pouches for right and left hip, each holding 3 mags and having accessory pouches as well. Heavy canvas with black leather trim just like the originals. Also marked with Waffen amp and Date/ Production code. Set $32.95 MP44005

GERMAN A-FRAME & COMBAT PACK

Excellent repro of the A-Frame harness and Combat Pack issued to German Infantry. We struck a great price on providing both items as a set. A Frame is ruggedly made with thick canvas and black leather straps and correct metal fittings. The Combat pack is a faithful reproduction too and has German wartime markings. Bargain priced at $37.50 MISC383 (Compare elsewhere at $55 and higher!)

AR 15 & AR 10 BARRELS – Nearly Complete!

Produced by a major U.S. barrel manufacturer, barrels are threaded for AR barrel extensions and are fully chambered. Plenty of barrel remaining for custom projects! We purchased these at a considerable savings and we can pass this onto you. Priced individually or purchase 10 pcs, and take 10% off! We have the following 2 categories of barrels: These straight contour barrels are threaded for AR barrel extensions and are fully chambered but do not have any other profile machining done.

ABOUT HIGH CAPACITY MAGAZINES:

Although we try to stay abreast of current State gun laws, it is a herculean task with over 20,000 laws on the books. By ordering, you are stating that you are complying with your Local & State laws. Most States allow large capacity magazines. Some do not. If you are unsure on this issue, contact your Local or State law enforcement to confirm what is allowed. This is a partial list of States with some hi-capacity restrictions: NJ, NY, MA, MD, HI, KS, CO, CT, IL and various county laws therein including Chicago, D.C.

REGARDING LOCAL, CITY & STATE REGULATIONS!

SARCO makes a large effort to keep abreast of state & local gun laws. With over 20,000 laws on the books this is a Herculean and impossible job. Some of the products sold by SARCO could be restricted for sale in your local area, while not restricted nationally. This could include, but not be limited to firearms, ammo, parts, high cap mags, edged weapons, air guns, etc. You must determine your right to purchase, own, use or resell specific products offered by SARCO in your jurisdiction. As local laws are constantly changing, it your responsibility to determine if a product is prohibited before ordering from SARCO. You warrant by ordering from SARCO that you are a legal adult without any legal restrictions from ordering and are complying with all state, local, and federal laws. ITALIAN BM59 RIFLE PARTS SETS

These are all of the parts except the receiver for the early model 7.62mm Italian BM59SL rifle. This rifle is essentially a standard M1 Garand semi-automatic that has been modified to use 20 rd. BM59 magazines, and has been chambered for 7.62mm Nato ammunition. It retains the well proven Garand sights, trigger mechanism and gas system, while doing away with the 8 round Garand clip in favor of a 20 round detachable box magazine. These parts sets can be assembled on an M1 Garand receiver which will require a few modifications to accept the new feed system. Parts are in very good condition, bores are nice, BM59002 $595.00 ea.
You can convert a Garand receiver. Set of blue prints for BM59 receiver: With kit $29.50 BM59003
Without kit $49.50 BM59004 (Note: BM59 prints are for the full auto only and are for dimensional reference only. They are also non returnable)

GHURKA KUKRIS KNIVES

Once Again Available - We've been Dry for 6 Months
The fierce ghurkas are the elite fighting troops of the Indian Army. Their very presence on the field of battle will often cause an enemy to fear for his life, due to the blood thirsty reputation of these fierce fighters. Every ghurka carries a Kukris knife, which he can use to deadly effect in hand-to-hand combat. We now have a nice selection of Kukris knives. Each knife comes in a black leather scabbard with two small "skinning" knives mounted on the scabbard

FAL294A FEW ORIGINAL BELGIAN FAL BARREL
GAS BLOCKS $39.95 FAL295*FAL PARTS SET

Long ago we acquired a small lot of early FN manufactured kits from 'conflict zones' in the Western Hemisphere, (Americas). Although many of the rifles had sustained battle damage, we have culled these out and can offer you the parts sets of these veteran rifles. These original metric FALs exhibit features of the early 'G' series FAL that have been so elusive. The Stock & handguards were in rough condition so we have replaced them with a new original steel military handguard set (value $90.00 - Handguard will be different than pictured) and an original new military period wood buttstock compatible with the early buttplate & swivel, (original buttplate and swivel are included). The barrel has been demilled, but the attaching parts are present including the swivel, regulator, front sight, gas block and flash hider. Bolt carrier, bolt assy, cover, charging handle, piston & spring, and other associated parts are present. No upper receiver. Great set of parts for building that Early FAL rifle that you've always wanted.

Get 'em while they last!!We offer these kits in 2 configurations:

PARA ORDNANCE LDA PISTOL PACKAGE

Brand new LDA complete Frame assembly in original Para Ordnance box! You can purchase this alone or reap tremendous savings on purchasing this with a SLIDE of your choice. The Para steel Frame accepts 3.5 inch and 4.25" slides and can be used with 3" slides if the hood is trimmed back - Will not work with a 5" slide. The frame is the Officer's Model LDA, single stack, and is not caliber specific so you can customize it to 38 Super, 9mm, 40 S&W, .45 ACP. The frame is cut for the Clark® type ramped barrels. The barrels and recoil spring assemblies are available from numerous commercial sources and the frame accepts the shorter 1911 Officers magazine. Enormous savings will be realized when you examine these prices against the price of a new LDA pistol of at $700-800!

- 1. Frame assembly in box.....$235.00 GUN588
- 2. Slide of your choice - 40% off retail price online! Go to our website and choose from a host of 3", 3.5" & 4.25" Para LDA slides. Valid on up to 10 Para LDA slides when purchased with Frame assy in box. Go to www.v-sarcoinc.com to make your selection.

Note: Para Ordnance Light Double Action Pistols are premium compact firearms popular for 'concealed carry' and well respected for quality and performance. Para Ordnance has been absorbed into Remington, and Sarco will also have a position in selling many of the original quality parts. ROCK ISLAND 1911 MICROMAG 22 TCM / 9MM

Randy from GunsForSale.com writes that this is a brand new 1911-style autoloader chambered in the new .22 TCM caliber. Rock Island Armory cartridge designer Fred Craig said the proprietary .223-based pistol caliber round sends a 40 grain jacketed hollow point bullet downrange at 2100 feet per second. The goal was to make a 1911-type pistol "with the same weight, but double the firepower and delivering more foot pounds of energy."

DON'T FORGET!! ALL OUR ROCK ISLANDS COME WITH A LIFETIME FACTORY WARRANTEE!

ATTENTION M1 CARBINE FANS:

Own A Piece of History. We just discovered a cache of German Erma-Werke EM1 .22LR carbines! These complete rifles resemble M1 Carbines... except that they are in .22LR caliber and are dovetailed for a .22 scope mount. The Israeli Military used them as trainers in the late 60's and early 70's. The condition of these rifles is good with some stock dents and dings from training, shipping and storage. Bores are excellent and have many years of life left in them. All Guns come with (1) 15 Round Magazine.

We are also offering some rifles missing both front and rear sights at a lower price for those who wish to mount a scope on their EM1.

Don't procrastinate!! These rifles won't last long. This is a rare find!

COMPLETE MAUSER, FULLY MACHINED & FORGED, LARGE RING EUROPEAN COMMERCIAL ACTIONS MANUFACTURED BY THE FAMED FIREARMS MAKER DUMOULIN OF ‘BELGIUM’

Building your own Sniper, Target, or Varmint rifle has never been so enticing! Sarco worked for over a year to bring you this colossal opportunity to own a brand new, complete Dumoulin Mauser action at the best price on the world market!!!! Let’s get to the objective specs, on what this means for you:

RECEIVER: This is an A-2 steel, forged / heat treated body which has been checked and gauged after each machining operation ensuring precision with strict tolerances and ultimately, superb mating with attached parts and adherence to Engineer drawings.

BOLT: A-2 Steel, one piece bolt, handle & knob with checkered flat on underside. The extractor is the traditional proven, ‘claw type’ extractor. Bolt Head diameter is set for the .30-06 family of cartridges.

(A2 Chromium/molybdenum/vanadium is tool steel).

RECEIVER SPECIAL FEATURES: Flats with threaded holes and dovetails, permit the use of a variety of rings and bases. This feature eliminates the need for screwed on bases. Each flat is predrilled and threaded for standard 6-48 screws in 2 places. Flat tops are parallel and at the same level. These Actions have been engineered from original FN Belgian blue prints.

TRIGGER MECHANISM: The trigger is fully adjustable for sear engagement, over travel, and creep. The trigger body is made of steel.

TRIGGER GUARD: This trigger guard is fully machined from a steel forging and has a hinged FN/ Ruger style floorplate and latch. Believe it or not, I priced a similar trigger guard at the Shotshow from a German supplier and they wanted $800 for the guard. The Action capacity is 5 rds. of .30-06 length ammo.

FINISH: These Actions and Guards are blued. Some have bright bolts.

RECEIVER THREADS: Threads are standard 1.10 x 12 TPI.

BOLT-SPECIAL FEATURES: Strength of the forged bolt exceeds that of bolts in normal production. The specially designed bolt sleeve is an FN type and incorporates a Winchester style side swing 3 position blocking safety. This type of safety allows the use of a single or double set trigger in complete safety and preventing a discharge. Currently a similar bolt sleeve sells for $150.00-$250.00 separately.

WHY PURCHASE THIS ACTION? To our knowledge, no one in the world presently makes a fully machined ‘98 Mauser action. Cost would be prohibitive! Just the value of the bolt assembly & trigger guard equate to more than our cost of the action. This may be your last chance to buy a fully milled ‘98 Mauser Action! *We know of no fully milled actions being produced in the world. These were produced many years ago and we bought the entire lot for posterity. These are the same actions Dumoulin uses to build their $10,000. rifles!

WHAT DO THE PROS SAY? - We gave some of these actions to one of the best barrel manufacturers in the U.S., a Custom Rifle Mfr., and an exceptionally talented gunsmith who prepares gunsmithing school courses, to see what they thought. They praised these actions and commented that, according to normal gunsmithing practices, the following should be observed where building a rifle:
1. Lap the bolt lugs & receiver locking recesses for full contact and improved accuracy.

2. Face off and true the front of the receiver.
3. Shape the feed ramp.
4. Checking the bolt face to make sure it is square & true.
5. Like any other high end firearm, these actions require your final hand fitting and tuning. These are not operations that a machine can do and are best left to the assembler.

NOTE: The hardness of the receiver & bolt were checked and are at RC47/48. (Optimal!)

HERE’S THE DEAL: We would NOT be embarrassed to offer these actions at $595., but we will pass our lucky buy onto you at the fabulous price of only $349.95 GUN567 as an introductory price. Price may go up later if we find we are too generous!

DUMOULIN BARRELS TOO!
We lucked out and purchased some barrels that were specifically made for these Dumoulin Mauser actions. They are threaded to the standard Mauser dimensions of 1.10 x 12 threads per inch. We can offer the following caliber barrels:
.270 Winchester..... $74.95 MSR602
.30-06..... $74.95 MSR601
Note: these barrels were purposely made with a .010” oversize thread OD for the tighter fit & more accuracy. They screw on just fine with proper barrel installation equipment. The shank length is .003” longer than receiver depth from front of receiver collar which is the proper thread crush for barrel seating. We also stock Dumoulin parts-See our 10th ad or visit our website!

MORE GOOD OLE’ DAYS!!

We were fortunate to acquire a small quantity of these rare commercial Colts that came from a police department in Argentina. This is the 1933 Colt commercial police contract and we don’t know that any of these have ever come to the U.S. before. Here’s your chance to fill that void in your collection or just get a good used .45 shooter.

BALLESTER MOLINA

As an improvement to the 1911 A1 pattern Argentina produced the Ballester Molina. Changes were made in the hammer strut, firing pin stop, safety lock, mainspring housing & trigger. Designed and built by the Argentine Co. Hispano Argentina Fabricada Automobiles (HAFDASA). These were marketed as an affordable alternative to the Colt 1927 Systema. These haven’t been available for many, many years.

- An interesting variation for your .45 1911 collection or as an affordable shooter
- Grips replaced with new or excellent proper Ballester Molina grips
- Magazines are replaced with new magazines for functionality
- For safety sake, we have replaced all recoil springs and firing pin springs

GUN511 Best grade gun - selected for marking condition $399.00
GUN512 Medium grade with markings worn $349.00
GUN513 Very worn markings $299.00

We have about 5 Ballester Rigauds in the pile. If you want one, please contact Mike Wilm
We have consecutive numbers in all variations! Original Colt up to 3 - Ballester Molina up to 9 - M1927 up to 6. Cost for consecutive #'s will be $200.00 extra – not too many available.

NOTE: All of these Argentine guns are C&R eligible. However if shipped to a C&R they must be sent via UPSD overnight. Some of Juan Perone’s personal guard guns still available call Mike Wilm.
We have very few guns left in Colt and Ballester that have a dark arsenal refinish—call Mike Wilm.

ENFIELD COLLECTOR FIND!!!

ENFIELD #1 MK3 WIRE BOUND GRENADE LAUNCHING RIFLE
Sarco has a few original Lee Enfield #1 MK3 Rifles that were purposefully wire bound for use with firing rifle grenades, because the pressures and duress on the rifle exceeded the pounding it took from firing the .303 cartridge by up to 3 times the pressure, the Ordnance Corps issued directives for wire wrapping the rifle mid-section for the purpose of retaining the hand guards and preventing them from splintering. The pressure, which also equated to dropping the rifle from about 12-14 feet on its butt end, gives one consideration for the stresses the rifle had to contend with. Now’s great chance to obtain one of these rare rifles. Rifle only, in good condition..... $295.00 GUN575

RPG-75 SHOULDER FIRED ROCKET LAUNCHER

Watch the news and you will probably see the RPG75 being used in combat by both sides in the Syrian conflict! This 2 foot long inert training RPG-75, opens and extends to 35" long, when ready for fire. Very similar to the U.S. M72 LAW Rocket Launcher, this Czech made rocket launcher weighs 7lbs and comes with shoulder strap and flip up sights. This is the same RPG you will see in many hotspots around the world, especially in various Bush Wars in Africa, by SWAPO units in Angola, and the Near East $199.95 RL010

M3 GREASE GUN

We have a small number of replica M3 Grease Guns that are made of metal! Really, the only full size & best reproduction on the market, and it shoots Airsoft 6mm BBs. Comes with magazine and stock. Sorry, no flash hiders available at this time. Also comes with rechargeable battery and charger. Looks Very Realistic!!! Check local laws in your area before ordering

RUSSIAN RPG-7 TRAINING ROCKET

Original Russian RPG-7 inert training rockets made primarily of aluminum with heavy duty rubberized warhead with fuse and Russian safety tag & clip. Booster comes in its own waxed storage tube just like the original and there is a bakelite 'screw on' safety cap, screwed onto the main rocket motor. Supremely realistic and perfect for display or use as an action prop. Weight is 5 lbs, length of assembled rocket is 36". These were stored well and show hardly any signs of use. Best we've seen on the market!..... $124.95 RL011

M63 FUZE SETTER

USGI fuze setter tool pressed into Israeli service where it probably adjusted countless artillery fuzes. WW2 U.S. M19 60mm PARATROOP MORTAR (non-firing display)

U.S. Marine Raider and Army Airborne units benefited from a light 60mm mortar assembly rushed to the front in 1942.

Roughly a 20 lb. mortar, this allowed a savings of 25+ lbs. over the standard M2 mortar, and allowed for more ammo to be carried. Paratroops learned how to utilize it by aiming with the M15 sight as used on the M1 Garand grenade launcher and by using a degree of 'Kentucky Windage' to walk rounds on top of the enemy at places like Bougainville, Solomon Islands, Guadalcanal, Operation Husky, etc. Also significant use occurred in Korea and Vietnam. Our non-firing steel replica uses the original WW2 issue baseplate and M15 sight assembly with a new made undersized I.D. tube and non-functional ball and cap assy. with lanyard latch firing lever. First time available in the United States! Mortar only. Supplies are very limited

It's Only A Matter of Time!

It's time to BE READY!

All you have to do is read the headlines to know why people all over the country are thinking more about preparedness. Whether it's catastrophic weather, utility breakdowns, terrorist attack or the collapse of civil order, millions of Americans aren't willing just to hope for the best. They are taking more active measures to get ready for the times when stopping at the grocery or the ATM won't be options. BE READY! addresses the skills and supplies they will need to survive.

FIFTEENTH ANNUAL SHOTGUN NEWS TREASURY

A Collection of the Best SHOTGUN NEWS Articles Published in 2014

ON NEWSSTANDS NOW!

SHOTGUN NEWS TREASURY Vol. 15

It's that time of the year again; time to pick up your copy of the SGN Treasury. Here in one volume, you'll find the best writing from the 2014 editions of SGN.

Peter Kokalis treats you to a magisterial three-part study of the Luger; a gun that has been covered more than most any other but still unveils secrets. David Fortier reveals what's hot and what's not in the AR world. Jim Tarr looks at Ruger's GP100 Match Champion, while Paul Scarlata details the guns of the Greek Civil War. Steve Matthews shows how to build an AR receiver from an 80% part, while Reid Coffield reminisces on his days with the late Bob Brownell.

The SHOTGUN NEWS Treasury covers everything from antiques to machine guns in the style SGN readers enjoy. It's 256 perfect-bound pages, with many features in full color!

ROCKOLA M14Special.....* $2,195Regular price....*$2,395

The Rockola M14F is built to the exact standards of the USGI original. The receiver is machined from an 8620 forging. This rifle is completed by using USGI original parts, a new U.S. made barrel and an excellent refinished wood stock. Our rifle is as close to the original USGI version available on the market today. A carbine configuration is also available with an 19.25" barrel.

EXPERIENCE HISTORY

M1 GARANDSpecial.....* $1,395Regular price....*$1,495

The M1, commonly called a Garand after it's designer John Garand, has been carefully restored to "arsenal re-issue". As the first semi-auto weapon issued to regular troops in the field it gave the U.S. a distinct advantage. The original GI receiver and all metal parts have been bead blasted and reparkerized in the original finish. The barrel is a new production Criterion. The M1 is a semiautomatic gas-operated rifle which is fed by an eight round "enbloc" clip.

1903A4 SNIPERSpecial.....* $1,295Regular price....*$1,495

Our 1903A4 sniper rifle is meticulously rebuilt using original 1903A3 receivers. The rifle, used well into the Vietnam war, is a late production model with 7/8 rings and new high quality 2.5 power Hi-Lux M82 scope. It's available with a Criterion 4 groove barrel. Production is limited.

"Why settle for less"

YOU CAN HAVE IT ALL!

SHEPHERD SCOPES—THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY RANGE-FINDING, BULLET DROP COMPENSATING SCOPE WITH PATENTED DUAL RETICLES!

Zero in with one shot at 100 yards & you now have the range & bullet drop capabilities out to 1000 yards on any power with no further adjustment.
"Quality, precision & ease of use you could only dream about"

THE ONLY SCOPE IN THE WORLD TO GUARANTEE ITS ADJUSTMENTS AND TRACKING TO BE 100% ACCURATE - 100% OF THE TIME!!!

The unique Dual Reticle System, having the cross hair in the rear focal plane and the range finding circles in the front focal plane allows you one-shot zeroing. It's what sets the Shepherd apart from Zeiss, Nikon, Swarovski and other high quality scopes. It permits one-shot Zeroing, dead-on holding to extreme range with any high velocity load, windage and elevation adjustments that you know are accurate because you can visually verify them as they take place. An aiming point that stays on dead zero throughout the complete magnification range, parallax-elimination, and a quick and easy way to adapt for wind without losing the basic zero. Sounds like a lot of goodies wrapped up in one scope. All built into the Shepherd and one way or another they all derive from the patented Dual Reticle System.

3-10X40 $799.00 6-18X40 $899.00 (prices subject to change without notice)

Don't look for discounts, this is already the best bargain on the market. Your savings will come in ammo & a full freezer. We can match your rifle & load. We have 24" circles for our big game hunters. 18" circles for our all around hunters & 9" circles for our varminters. Join our Shepherd friends, grab your Shepherd scopes mounted on your rifles & be AMAZED at your shooting skills.

"With about two minutes of instructions my trainees were making consistent hits from 100 to 800 yards with the Shepherd P2 scope. Later that night under a quarter moon they outshot the Starlight Scope at the 300 meter range. They were amazed. I wasn't...I own a few Shepherds and I know what they can do..."

— MSG DELMONT USAR (RET)
MARKSMANSHIP INSTRUCTOR

SHEPHERD'S EASY ONE SHOT ZERO!

"I have been using one of the first Shepherd DRS scopes since early 1983, and a late model for some months. It is impressive, to say the least. Unlike other Range finding & Bullet drop systems, Shepherd DOES NOT REQUIRE THE USE OF THREE HANDS. IT'S FAST AND DEADLY", BOB BELL in Gun Digest. Author of Gun Digest book of SCOPES & MOUNTS

WHAT ABOUT ACCURACY???

"As for accuracy, the scope's 600 yard range finding circle produced a three shot 3.75 inch group two inches above dead center at 600 yards. The 1,000 yard circle at 1,000 yards put all shots in the black with an average elevation error of 3.33 inches. I did much more experimental shooting at various ranges (nearly 450 rounds), and my personal BOTTOM LINE IS that this ®Shepherd P1 Scope is staying right where it is, on top of my Remington 700-P rifle!"

NOTE FROM DAN SHEPHERD:
Our new 6x18x40 VARMINT/TARGET SCOPE WON TWO NATIONAL NRA TARGET MATCHES IN 2001.

"Darned if I didn't bowl prairie dogs over at 250 yards, and some of these barely quivered after being hit. One thing for certain, I never missed by much - even at 250 yards with that rimfire. Without the Shepherd Scope, however, I don't think I'd ever have been able to come so close," Nick Sisley, in Magnum Guns & Shooting 1986.

During times like these, we're all looking to get the most value from every dollar we spend. Fortunately, value is standard equipment with every Hi-Point purchase.

No matter what environment or condition you find yourself in, there's no comparison to Hi-Point firearms for rugged and reliable service.

Whether you're a varmint hunter, plinker or target shooter, no one else delivers so much solid, reliable performance, for so little.

Maybe we are bragging, but we truly believe that hands-down, Hi-Point is America's Best Firearm Value.

Fred’s Military M14 Rifle Stocks

FREE! w/every order CMP info 25meter sight-in target genuine shooting/GI surplus item & valuable pro-gun info!

As I’m prepping for retirement, the good news is our new website; you might want to take a look at it! Even better news: Orders are charged the day they ship; you get an email w/UPS#; more images uploaded; we now accept Discover and Amex as well as Visa/MC - in other words, a considerable upgrade. But better hurry, as we’re down to 25,000 stocks! Whew! I’ll be happy (and sad) to see that last stock go out the door!

M14 Stocks Fred’s - The Nations Largest Dealer

‘Presentation’ - the best you find, HARD to find. “P” doesn’t stand for “perfect”, but as near perfect as you get! ‘As New’ metal. Walnut/Birch w/DoD & P - Big Red is unmarked.
Please check website for price and availability.

‘As New’ - as above but with usual small storage dings. Metal ‘as new’. Being almost 50 years old, they’re getting a little hard to find. Each has DoD/P except BR.
Please check website for price and availability.

ExcellentPlus - GI M14 stocks close to ‘as new’, or - at least! - at the top of the excellent grade. Buttplates usually excellent or better. Call ‘em, the best of the ‘excellents’! DoD & P.
Please check website for price and availability.

Excellent - Used, not much, w/VG-EXC buttplates. Fits any milspec M14-type semiauto, as all our stocks do, even Chinese M14 rifles.
Please check website for price and availability.

‘Selectplus’ - Good used stocks near, but not quite, ‘excellent’. A few dings too many to be ‘excellent’, but certainly nice stocks - easy to ‘clean up’! W/metal, “DoD” & “P” (except Big Reds).
Please check website for price and availability.

Military-refinished M14 Stocks Each refinished by Uncle Sam to military standards- smooth-sanded, repaired as needed, completely ready for re-issue. Buttplates painted or left ‘as-is’ Please check website for price.

ARE YOU AN AMERICAN?
Our goal next year: 2000+ Appleseeds, *50,000+ Appleseeders. Can’t do it with you there, laying on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life (you have to get off the couch!)
2014: *2000 Appleseeds, *100,000+ Appleseeders. Can’t do it with you there, on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life (won’t work - you gotta get off that couch...) Our goal in SIX, FIVE, FOUR THREE years [2016]: 40,000 Appleseeds [someone has said, “we’ll have to build more rifle ranges” and we’ll be doing that, thru the Designated Appleseed Range program], 1,000,000+ Appleseeders. Can we do it with you there, on the couch, fighting for liberty and your way of life? (won’t work...you gotta get off)
The only way this will happen will be for you to get off that couch, and help!
Can we save a nation? Before you scoff, reach down inside you and poke that sleeping American there, and ask him.
He’ll tell you, straight out: We Americans can do anything we put our minds to.
Sign up to be at an Appleseed! Save money, by learning to hit the target - with every shot!

- ❑ 25m Army Qualification Test [AQT] Targets - In the battle for freedom, be on the front line and in the history books, able to shoot a rifle - not in the rear, cooking! If things ever start poppin’, there may be room up front only for those who can shoot. And, recent 60’s counterculture to the contrary, up front is where you wanna be, defending your freedoms, punching the message home to those who’d take it away. The AQT, the Army Precision Combat Rifle Course, measures your current ability to shoot any rifle (even .22). Don’t be in doubt any longer: you need to know how well you can shoot now. Then use the Guide to improve your shooting to Rifleman standards. 10 sets (four 12” X 16” sheets per set) with Fred’s no-fail “Guide to Becoming a Rifleman”! One set for $16 (+ UPS). Quantity discounts: 2 sets for $30, 5 sets for $60. Every set comes with its own Guide - order 5 sets, get 5 Guides. Pool with friends, save money, everyone gets a Guide!

❑ 100-yd AQT target pacs! 100 AQT silhouettes for 25m or 100-yd shooting. Shoot the Advanced AQT: staple 4 targets at 100 & fire the normal 25m course. It’s tough - but fun! Or practice your standing at 25m & your prone slow-fire at 100 yds. 100 targets, one AQT silhouette per 8 X 11 target sheet. 25 complete Advanced AQT sets! Or just good practice targets! $10/100

❑ The ‘Quick’n Dirty’ AQT - One-sheet w/all four AQT stages. The one we shoot at Appleseed. Quick, ‘cause you staple up only one sheet, not four; dirty, ‘cause you get fast results. Great for practice, getting to that magic 1-inch, 4 moa group that defines RIFLEMAN. Great to sucker newbies into shooting! Perfect for club matches. 50 sheets = 50 complete AQTs for $12! Heck, 50 tries, even a monkey can make it!

❑ HITS COUNT (REDCOAT) TARGETS: The targets taking America by storm! Where else can you find a target that measures HOW FAR OFF YOU ARE EFFECTIVE WITH YOUR RIFLE - and requires only 25m (27 yards) to do it? And requires only 13 rounds and 60 sec.? Bundled 100 approx for $15

❑ THE BEST CHOICE? The AQT/QD Target Combo! 60 times at bat, plenty of targets - perfection! Where can you buy perfection, and save a coupla bucks doing it? $26 2/$50

- ❑ “Rifleman” T-Shirt - Rifleman, here’s your shirt! Front: ‘Rifleman’ definition Rear: “Shooting - the only sport endorsed by the Founding Fathers - an American Tradition”. Ash Gray M, L, XL $10 ea Sweatshirts L, XL only: $15

❑ Rifleman package! Only at Fred’s! New milspec USMC-style cloth shooting jackets, w/elbow/shoulder/upper sling arm pads. Wear in the field, too. As a package with the AQT targets & Guide, only to riflemen - to help would-be riflemen get started: [S, M Chest 39-42, L 43-45, left or right] $80 [jacket, targets, and Guide! Size Suggestion: Order a size up so you have room for sweatshirts/sweater underneath in cooler weather! Special deal! Add $7 for a “Rifleman” T-shirt!

❑ M1 Op Rod Springs - New. Get one, “just in case.” $5

❑ M14 Unissued M 60 MAG Bandoleers - Original cotton 100-rd M60 pouch, w/carry strap, holds 5 M14 mags, 3 fit in GI 50-cal can, 2 in .30 can. $3 4/$10 10/$25 100/$75

- ❑ Squad Automatic Weapon Unissued MAG Pouch - has carry-strap and tie-down; ideal to quickly store your empty mags or brass at the range. No fumbling, no bumping, just toss in the cotton pouch/bag. SAW pouches are handy things to have around! $5 ea 3/$11

❑ M14 Ammo Repacks - 6-pckt bando [most w/safety pin], 12 5-rd clips, 6 cardbds, HTF mag filler - all unissued US GI, and getting scarce. Each 60-rd bandoleer equals three standard M14 mags $8 ea 10/$75

❑ US M1 Carbine Repack Kits - 12 10-rd clips, cardboards, bandoleer. $12 10/$75 Carbine Stripper Clips 10/$10 M1 Carbine bandoleers - hold 120 rds $4 3/$10

❑ Collectors! Navy Garand Ammo Repacks - Bandoleers mrkd “7.62 mm NATO/Ball, M80/8-rd Clips” for Navy M1 Garands in .308. Complete with six cardboards, six unissued Garand clips. RARE! $10 ea 5/$45
■ Super RARE Navy Garand Ammo Repacks with unusual half-inch shorter cardboards specifically for .308. Stamped “8-rd”, unissued. M1 lovers, get one for your collection. A rare collectible, for a buck more? It’s nuts! $11
■ US GI Garand Clips unissued - 2 ea 20/$30.00

❑ M14 Slotted Handguards w/clip: HTF in good shape!
❑ “presentation” $50 ❑ “as new” $20 ❑ “Exc.” $12
❑ “Gd- VG” $8 2/$14 ❑ fair - ugly, but work $5 8/$12

❑ Solid Handguards w/clip: The later solid HG was very durable in service. ❑ “presentation” $20 ❑ as-new $12 ❑ Exc/as-new $6 2/$10 ❑ VG $4 2/$6 ❑ fair - yes, they will work fine, but be ugly $2 12/$12

❑ M14 Buttstock Cleaning Kits - Clean your rifle - more important, make field repairs - and add 2/3 lb to dampen recoil in rapid fire. Common problems - loose rear sight, stuck gas piston, dirty chamber - all are easy to handle with this kit handy in the buttstock, where you’ll never ‘forget to bring it’! Complete 4-pc steel rod, tip, pouch, bore brush, chamber brush, combo tool handle, oiler.
❑ ‘As New’ grade - complete, as above $25 ❑ Excellent $18
❑ VG $12 ❑ Average $10

❑ US GI M14 Op Rod Springs - US GI, fresh from original US gov’t boxes, a new supply just in! $6

❑ M14 Black Handguards w/clips: (scarce) HTF in the better grades. ❑ ‘P’ $50 ❑ Exc-‘as new’ $25 ❑ vg-exc $12 ❑ good $8 2/$12 ❑ fair $5 6/$15

❑ M14 Buttplates - GI hinged buttplate w/screws, rear swivel. ‘Exc-As New’ $25 VG/Exc $15 Used $9 6/$50 ❑ Buttplate only, no mounting screws or swivel. Used $5 6/$25 Exc $10 6/$50

❑ Metal Starter Tabs for .30 MG Belts - GI, unissued Hard to find. Nice piece of history. $ 3 10/$15 100/$30

❑ M14 Stock Metal - SORRY, OUT OF STOCK!

Fred’s

“Bottom line, I could live in the problem or live in the solution... I chose the solution, Appleseed.” Wade

“WILL NYC BE THERE? OR FRED, THE POOR...”

I was on the way to wealth, having hit upon an idea some months ago of betting with anyone with a sporting instinct on whether NYC would “be here” in ten years.
Yes, it’s possible even in a world of terrorism and terrorists to glean a bit of silver lining from an otherwise dark cloud, and turn a potential catastrophic event into “something interesting”, as they say in the sporting world.
“Be here” being defined as not exhibiting a radioactive crater anywhere within its boundaries. If such a crater appeared, I would receive from the bettor a free meal at my favorite and generally-undiscovered-and-great-place-to-eat, Wendy’s. If on the other hand NYC in ten years does not exhibit the crater, I’d be the one buying the meals.
It was win-win. Enough bets, and I’d never be hungry again. On the other hand, lose the bet, and I’d at least be happy that NYC escaped the wrath of the terrorists – at least, for ten years.
Why NYC, and not, say, “DC”? First, the terrorists seem to have a thing for NYC; second, the PTB in DC will ensure that Washington is the LAST place in America without ironclad protection, layered and over-layered. Those with the purse-strings are not gonna be stingy with protecting their own feathered nests...and hindends.
So I was pretty confident, given today’s world, that I would be living high off the hog at Wendy’s in a few years, as I don’t think it will take the entire ten years to collect the bet.
But then – disaster! – recent events intervened. Since the “Iranian deal”, I can’t find anyone willing to bet NYC will be here in ten years...
Can you grasp that? Can you get your head around it?
A leader of this country, in slavish mimicry of Neville Chamberlain, brings back “peace in our time” in the form of a piece of paper – a treaty – and guarantees disaster – or in this case, if you believe those who now refuse to take my proposed bet – a smokin’ crater where New York is now, but maybe not so much longer...
And it’s happening right out in front of everyone. In public. As visible as the nose on your face.
Incredible!
Unbelievable! [Unless you’ve been immersed in modern America, land of apathetic, ignorant, lazy, arrogant, concealed dolts, doomed, because of that ignorance, to repeat the history they so willingly are ignorant of. Ouch! I’m sure not happy to say that, for sure – I’d hope we’d be the land of Hope and Glory, this generation better than the last, etc, etc – not worse...]

But we have to live with the reality we’ve been given.
Hence, an end to free meals at Wendy’s, no one being willing, anymore, to take the bet. Hence, “Fred, the Poor...” Or maybe, better, Fred the Hungry. All those delicious hamburgers – and now I’ll have to pay for each and every one of them...
But Fred’s little predicament is Fred’s little predicament. There’s the larger issue of NYC going down the tubes. When it happens, and remember, no one will any longer take the bet, it sure will say something about the people running this country – for sure!
Is this – will it be – a much-needed wake-up call? Or will the PTB be able to spin it so that their enemies – in this country – get the blame? Smart money says the people who can’t choke out the words “Islamic terrorist” will be able to shift the blame to their enemies right here in America. That is, you and me.
Not a smidgeon of blame will rest on their shoulders when they get thru analyzing how NYC got blown up. Bet on it.
A few years back, stuff like this would not be written. In fact, it wouldn’t even be thought.
That’s a sign of the recent progress we’ve made in voluntarily sinking our own ship. In tearing the country down, and remaking it into a vision different – far different – from that of the founders.
We’ve got something nice, in this country. Something people spent generations building.
It can be torn down. And it is being torn down. Right in front of our eyes. By people who no longer give us the courtesy of doing it behind our back, in secrecy.
They have so little respect – so little fear – of you and me that they no longer worry about us.
Tear a great country down, while you sit idly by – OK, maybe voting every few years, more or less unenthusiastically – when you should be in a near state of revolt and outrage.
[Shakes head...]
But it’s never too late. Not if you have any pretensions to being the kind of person you want to be. Appleseed is there, waiting for you, if you ever decide you want to get off the couch, and become an American again. And pick up a bucket and help save this country, before it really is too late. Which is what “can do” Americans do.
And, if you’re interested in a free meal at Wendy’s simply email me and state you’re so confident New York will still be here [defined as not a single radioactive event] that you’re willing to risk buying me a Wendy’s meal in ten years... or less. I’ll thank you – and enjoy my meal!

DYER CARTRIDGE BOX

Gen. Alexander Dyer's (Chief of Ordnance, 1864-74) cartridge box filled the requirements for a cartridge box that would allow for quick and easy access to the .45 cal. revolver cartridge used in the Colt S.A. revolvers during the last quarter of the 19th century. The boxes have fleece lining to protect the loose ammo from knocking about. Original Dyer boxes are now extremely rare, expensive and fragile. Our replica is an absolute dead ringer in all respects. Brown or Black leather with US embossed.

PILOTS VICTORY SHOULDER HOLSTER

Pilots Victory Model Shoulder Holster with removable 38 cal Bullet loops slipped onto the shoulder strap. This sought after type of holster was issued to US pilots. This holster will accommodate the S&W Model 10, Rugers, Blackhawks, and like revolvers with up to a 4 1/2 inch barrel length. Tan leather embossed U.S. and available in both right and left hand.

#PCL-12-SH $44.90 ea.

M-7 SHOULDER HOLSTER

This perfect reproduction of the M-7 holster used by tankers, Air Force and just about anyone in the service that could get their hands on one. Brand new and complete with all mounting straps. Available in Tan or Black saddle leather, right or left hand and all are embossed US.

#PCL-56 $44.90 ea.

TYPE 26 REVOLVER HOLSTER

Constructed for the cavalry revolver, model of 1893 (type 26) and in use throughout the entire first half of the 20 century this holster made of tan cowhide fitted with a shoulder sling and ammo pouch with 18 bullet loops, new, right hand.

#PCL-61 $49.90 ea.

1917 U.S. HOLSTER

A fine and authentic replica of the Model 1917 revolver holster. Suitable for the S&W and Colt Model .45 cal revolver. Our holster has the hard to find "Ring & Stud" for the leg tie-down. There are two eyelets in the belt loop for a leather thong which secures the holster in position on the cartridge belt. Constructed from tan Cowhide, right and left hand, new, Embossed U.S. or USMC available in right hand only.

#PCL-18 $44.90 ea.

M-1 CARBINE SLING & OILER

Completely faithful to the early Horseshoe type 1st issue. The "dot the eye" fastener, khaki web sling are exactly as per the original WWII issue. The oiler has the shaped dipper and gasket. Sling & Oiler may be purchased separately or as a set and you can save $!

#PCL- Oiler Only $5.40 ea. #PCL- Sling Only $9.90 ea.

#PCL-48 $13.50 SET

US CANVAS MUZZLE COVER

The Muzzle Cover was developed in the early 1940's for the M-1 carbine, M-1 Garand and the M1903 Springfield rifle series. The strap has two snap positions for securing the muzzle cover over the barrel. Marked U.S. on one side and E.A. Brown MFG on the other. Constructed of Khaki webbing.

#PCL-5 $9.50

2 PKT. 1911 POUCH

This leather magazine pouch designed to be worn on a leather belt comes in two colors, tan or black and in several versions with no markings, embossed US or USMC (black only).

#PCL-39-L $16.90 ea.

BELT HANGER FOR 1916 HOLSTER

This dandy little accessory slips over the G.I. belt and allows a pistol in the 1916 holster to be carried lower than normal similar to a Mod 1912 holster. Definitely improves the "heft" of the pistol. Available in Tan, Black with Black stitching or Black with White stitching.

#PCL-99 $9.90 ea.

U.S. LEATHER CHEEKPIECE

This U.S. military design Padded Leather "lace-on" cheek piece. Originally for the M-1 Sniper rifles. These are an enormously helpful accessory which can be used effectively with all U.S. service high powered rifles as well as a whole range of European military rifles. Mauser's, Mosins, Nagants, etc. Definitely helps take the punishment out of shooting High Power Rifles. Top grain cowhide, marked on back "MRT", new and available for both right and left handed shooters. Choose from plain or embossed US.

#PCL-42 $24.90 ea.

1881 U.S. CAVALRY FLAP HOLSTER

With the Colt S.A. and S&W Schofield pistols being issued, the Model 1881 holster was designed to accept either one. The holster will fit the 7 1/2" Colt or the 8" S&W and the flap will "lock" properly because of the two locking slots. This big handsome replica holster comes in Black Cowhide, Embossed US, new. Available for "Butt forward" or "Butt Back" configuration. Also available for the 5 inch revolver also (PCL-50-B) right hand only.

#PCL-50A $44.90 ea.

1911 WEB 2 PKT. POUCH

This web magazine pouch was adopted in 1923. Worn on the web pistol belt and used by all troops in WWII who carried the 1911 pistol. Marked U.S. on the front and AVERY 1942 on the back. Khaki.

#PCL-39 $14.90 ea.

STRIPPER CLIPS

Brand new production clips. These function perfectly with either 9mm or .30 Cal C96, Bolo or 712!

#PCL-118 (1)-$3.90 • (2)-$6.90 • (10)-$29.90

M-1 CANVAS CASES WITH FLEECE LININGS

These Khaki canvas cases are just like the ones we sell but offer much more protection for your M-1 Garand, M-1 Carbine, 03 Springfield or M-14 Rifle. They look the same on the outside but are fleece lined on the inside. New marked US. Get yours today.

#PCL-40-WL (CARBINE) $34.90

#PCL-43-WL (GARAND)

M-1 CARBINE PARATROOPER CARRY CASE

U.S. M1 Carbine Paratrooper Scabbard. Designed for the M1-A1 Carbine with folding stock, these padded web scabbards are exact replicas in all respects. Used for a limited time in WWII and extremely rare. A must have for any M-1 Carbine kept with a folding stock. Khaki color with U.S. Markings.

Integral Feed Ramp Yields Remarkable Feeding Reliability!!

The innovative and unique integral feed ramp design means 9mm-1911 shooters can now have a full 10rd capacity with remarkable feeding reliability. The geometry and surface finish on the pistol receiver is no longer critical due to the integral feed ramp design; the bullet tips no longer engage the receiver feed like with all other 10rd-9mm mags. Instead, the bullet tips engage the integral magazine feed ramp and are directed straight up and into the barrel chamber!! Same size and configuration as 8rd-45 Power Mags.

These photos depict the bullet tips engaging the integral feed ramp

HUNTER'S LODGE CORPORATION

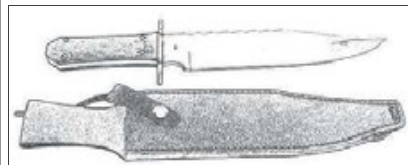

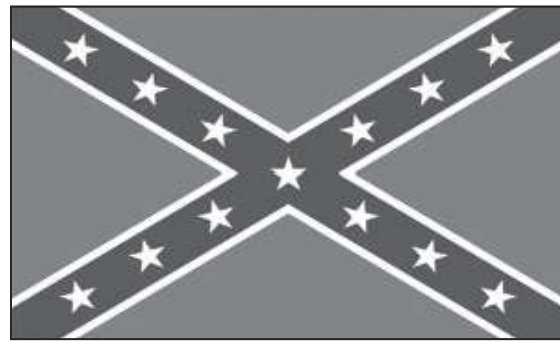

has been rated as a top seller of Historical Antique Weapons and Accoutrements of Historical value FIVE YEARS IN A ROW by the leading world wide consumer magazine for collectors.

INFAMOUS CIVIL WAR CONFEDERATE ROUGH RIDER MUSKET

There was not a horse or mule these Rough Riders could not ride, armed with these custom created muskets and a large bowie knife tucked in the waist belt and the musket in a leather saddle scabbard, speed turned into victory for the Confederate Army.

These beautiful 58 caliber custom 24" barrel Enfield style muskets are a faithful replica of the ones supplied to General Forrest's original Rough Riders of the Civil War. These mounted troops raised havoc with the Union troops to protect the Confederate Forces.

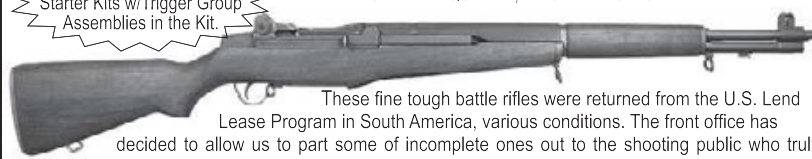

We now can offer you the 24" 58 caliber musket in a leather saddle scabbard along with a custom hand made full tang 10" blade Bowie knife in a beautiful leather sheath with brass bolsters all as one beautiful set for only $424.88 per set with a free Confederate Battle flag for display. A retail value of over $750.00 throughout the country. Supply limited.

NOTICE
Found 200 more Garand Starter Kits w/Trigger Group Assemblies in the Kit.

U.S. M-1 GARAND RIFLE STARTER KITS

NO FFL REQUIRED, RECEIVERS NOT AVAILABLE.

These fine tough battle rifles were returned from the U.S. Lend Lease Program in South America, various conditions. The front office has decided to allow us to part some of incomplete ones out to the shooting public who truly appreciate the finest battle rifle ever produced in the world. Each kit contains a U.S. issue 30-06 barrel dated in the 50s with shootable bores, a complete wood set with hand guards, less metal. All parts are used but serviceable with refinishing or tinkering. At this super low price you can obtain spare parts and gather slowly the remaining parts to build a fine M-1 Garand. All kits SOLD AS IS. SPECIAL ONLY $119.88 for the first 200 customers. The following parts can be purchased separately: • Barrels @ $75.00 • Trigger Group @ $79.50 • Stock set @ $28.50. Buy as a kit and save nearly $80.00 on the special offer.

The Minuteman's .75 Cal. Brown Bess Musket

Ye Olde Hunter can now offer you the fine museum quality muskets to you, the American shooting and collecting patriots. This first model long land pattern Brown Bess was the main battle weapon of the ever expanding British Empire in service for over 100 years. It helped to forge a new nation, in the hands of our Minutemen, who relieved the British of their weapons and turned the Minutemen into a force that routed the British and created the United States of America, the world's greatest power. High quality reproductions such as these cost in excess of $1500.00 each.

Now Hunter's Lodge offers you these muskets on the 239th anniversary of the U.S. for only $788.80.

BLANK AMMUNITION by: Manufacturing Research

- We manufacture blank ammunition for most popular pistol, rifle, and shotgun calibers.
- Most of our blanks are star crimped with no wad, so there is no projectile that leaves the barrel when firing.
- We make patented blank firing barrels for Glock 17, 19, 22, 23 and Sig P229 in 9mm & 40cal. These blank barrels drop in the gun with no other parts change, and action the gun just like live fire when using our custom designed blanks.

SHOTGUN NEWS

The trading post for anything that shoots.

than just ads!

Every issue has a unique blend of fascinating feature stories and information-packed columns. Here's where you'll read about the guns you see advertised in SHOTGUN NEWS!

Senior Editor Peter Kokalis brings his tart, scrupulous brand of commentary to the world of tactical arms in the first issue every month, with longer pieces in the perfect-bound issues that run six times a year.

The first issue of the month adds Clayton E. Cramer's scholarly take on gun politics and a historical look at ammunition from Paul Scarlata.

David Fortier looks at some of the newest developments in ammunition, firearms and optics in the second issue, along with Reid Coffield's folksy insights on gunsmithing. Frank James offers his hand-gunning expertise, while Vin Suprynowicz applies his blowtorch wit and insight to the struggle for the right to bear arms. The SHOTGUN NEWS New Products column gives you a look at the newest arms, ammo and accessories—well before the monthly firearms magazines get to them.

A jackpot package of features comes your way in the third issue of the month, along with Tom Gaylord's "Airgun" column.

Every issue of SHOTGUN NEWS features political commentary from Chris and Jeff Knox.
